Issue Statement Expressing Confidence in Fairness of Tribunal to Pass Upon Common Stock Dividends

CALL IT SAFER STEP

Provisions More Favorable Than Any Future Legislature Is Likely to Grant Is Warning Advice

Urging the acceptance of the legislative act authorizing the Boston Elevated to buy the property of the West End street railway, the board of directors of the West End today sent circular letters to the stockholders. The statement follows, in part:

"Your directors who could be consulted, with the exception of Charles M. Baker, who is out of the country but who desires to be recorded as opposed to any action under the act, are strongly of the opinion that it is wise to accept the act and authorize the sale.

"They feel confident that it is safe for you to rely upon the fairness of the tribunal provided by the act to pass upon the question whether the common stock shall receive dividends at a larger rate than 7 per cent per annum, namely the three arbitrators to be appointed by the chief justice of the supreme judicial court, and think that the other provisions of the act are more favorable to you than those which are likely to be granted by any future Legislature.

"Your directors feel that the position of your stock under the proposed consolidation is safer than if the act were rejected. It must be borne in mind that future financing after the consolidation must under the law be so done by the Elevated company that its bonds shall not increase faster than its common stock, all of which common stock will add to your security.

"Moreover, it should be borne in mind that it is unconstitutional to limit by legislation the earnings of any company to a point below a reasonable return on the sum invested.

"Finally, the Elevated company has never been able to issue in the past and can never hereafter issue securities, either bonds or stock, for any of its expenditures, whether for land damages, rights of way, or for anything else, except with the approval of the board of railroad commissioners."

The statement is signed by these directors: Joseph B. Russell, president; Edwin F. Atkins, Parkman Dexter, John Parkinson, C. Minot Weld, Stephen M. Weld, Moses Williams, Alfred Winsor.

There is every indication that there will be a lively session Sept. 6 at 10 a. m. in Wesleyan hall when the question comes up for discussion and vote of the stockholders.

Stockholders in West End decline to reveal their attitude on consolidation.

The minority stockholders are against acceptance of the consolidation on the basis of 7 per cent, and under the leadership of Francis W. Welch are expected to oppose the plan at the meeting.

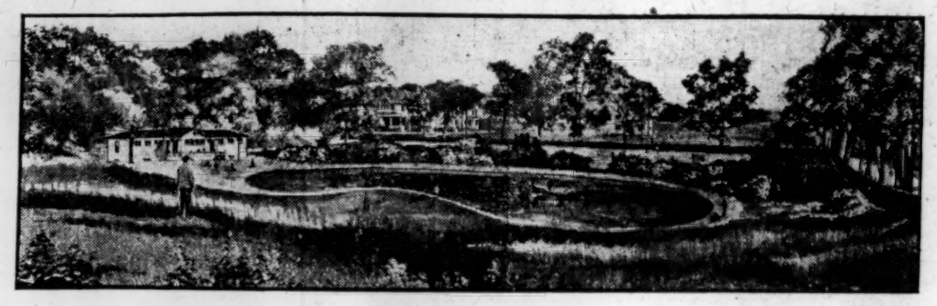
The protective committee is an allied interest determined to oppose any terms that will not give the West End stockholders shares of stock equal in value to those they now hold.

The directors will distribute their circular urging acceptance of the bill in a few days. As soon as it is issued the protective committee promises to reply.

CHARGED WITH FRAUD IN MAILS

NEW YORK—Two officers of the Sun Electrical Generating Company, a Texas corporation capitalized at $5,000,000, were before United States Commissioner Shields today, charged with using the mails to defraud. The prisoners taken when the company's officers were raided and the books and papers seized, were George H. Cove, president, and George H. Burlingame, stock selling agent of the concern. The men furnished $2500 and $5000 bail for a hearing in October.

SWIMMING POOL AND BATH HOUSE FOR BELMONT



Design by Loring Underwood

Feature of recreation park donated to the town, which is to have accommodations for 100 bathers and be under supervision of a competent instructor

Work is to start at once on the new swimming pool, bath house and recreation park presented to the town of Belmont by Henry Underwood. Plans have been prepared by Loring Underwood.

The pool will be 100 feet wide and 150 feet long. The sanded bottom will gently slope from the shores to a depth of eight feet in the center. At that point a masonry island is to be constructed with spring boards for diving. Natural planting will veil the pool from the street. A competent swimming instructor will look after the swimmers, a small fee being charged to cover this expense. The maximum number accommodated at one time will be about 100.

COTTON BILL VOTE IS ADVERSE IN THE COMMITTEE

WASHINGTON—The Senate finance committee voted today to report the cotton bill back to the Senate adversely.

The measure will be formally submitted to the Senate tomorrow, the day set in a resolution calling upon the committee for a report.

A motion made by Senator Williams (Dem., Miss.) to report the bill favorably was defeated, 9 to 5, along party lines.

A motion by Smoot (Rep., Utah) to report the bill adversely was carried without a division.

ADMITS CHANGING DECISION TO HELP THE REMSEN BOARD

WASHINGTON — At the continued cross examination today of Solicitor McCabe before the House committee on expenditures in the agricultural department, H. E. Davis, counsel for Dr. Wiley, obtained an admission that a change had been made in the language of a court decision by Mr. McCabe before it had been promulgated by the pure food board.

Mr. Davis brought a witness from the government printing office, who testified that Mr. McCabe had ordered the words "benzoic acid" stricken from the published print. Mr. McCabe admitted that the word "caffein" was substituted for the words stricken out and also that the words "a harmful" had been inserted before the words "coal tar dye."

In answer to a question Mr. McCabe said he believed the notice of judgment promulgated was truthful, because the department had never charged that the use of benzoic acid made the product harmful. Mr. McCabe said he had made the charges in the order of judgment conform to the original citation sent out by the department.

Mr. Davis also brought to the attention of the committee the appointment of a coffee expert under practically the same circumstances as Dr. Rusby was appointed by Dr. Wiley, for which "condign punishment" was recommended by the personnel board and Attorney-General Wickersham.

The coffee expert was William Harris, who is employed in the bureau of chemistry at $9 a day for examining samples and $50 a day for attendance in court as an expert.

"What is the difference between the Harris and Rusby cases?" asked Mr. Davis.

"The Harris case was unusual," replied Mr. McCabe. "He was the only coffee expert the government could get."

There was a sharp clash among members of the committee when the Wiley case, now before the president, was brought up by Mr. Davis. The latter asked Mr. McCabe:

"Did you write the findings of the personnel board which charged Dr. Wiley with having illegally employed Dr. Rusby at an excessive per diem rate?"

Representative Sloane of Nebraska objected.

Representative Mays of Florida said that "the people were getting tired of technical objections raised here to keep out evidence."

Mr. McCabe admitted that he had prepared the memorandum for the personnel board in the Rusby case in answer to a request from Dr. Dunlop. Then followed this series of questions by Mr. Davis and answers by Mr. McCabe.

"Was Dr. Wiley in the city when this was called to your attention by Dr. Dunlop?"

"I don't know."

"Did you speak to Dr. Wiley about the matter?"

"No, I think not."

"Did Dr. Wiley have any knowledge that this charge was to be brought to the attention of the secretary?"

"I don't know."

LORIMER INQUIRY SUSPENDED

WASHINGTON — Further investigation of the election of Mr. Lorimer to the Senate was suspended by the Dillingham committee until early October, when hearings will be resumed in Chicago.

RESERVES SUBWAY DECISION

NEW YORK—Justice Ford of the supreme court today heard arguments and reserved decision on the application of the Admiral Realty Company for an injunction restraining subway construction.

RIVERBANK RESIDENTS TAXED $212,776 UNDER THE BETTERMENT ACT

Metropolitan Park Commission's Assessments for Improvements Along the Charles Made Public

BASED ON THE COST

Property Holders Along Brimmer and Beacon Streets and a Number of Institutions Are Affected

It was announced today that residents of the West End and Back Bay along Brimmer and Beacon streets have been assessed $212,776.42 as betterments to their property arising from the construction of the Charles river embankment, which was built in connection with the construction of the Charles river basin and dam.

These betterments have been assessed through a special commission of assessors appointed by the metropolitan board. The assessments equal a little more than one quarter of the cost of the embankment, $800,000. Upon the whole basin improvement $4,000,000 was spent.

Acting under chapter 524 of the acts of 1909, 402 of 1906, and 465 of 1903, the park commissioners have announced their determination of the value of the benefits to the abutters between the Fenway and new Cambridge bridge.

July 1, 1910, the commission took the basin, and at once started work on the assessing of the betterments. These assessors were Salem D. Charles, chairman of the street commissioners of Boston, John Kiley, the mayor's realty expert, former Alderman Francis R. Bangs and former Assessors John Donovan and Alonzo W. Andrews.

The commission of assessors has met frequently for over a year. The figures announced this afternoon are those first submitted by Chairman Charles. The year's investigation has confirmed his estimates.

The figures are considered by many as high assessments on the betterments, and it is freely predicted that many protests will be filed.

The metropolitan park commission is maintaining its right to withhold the detailed report as a private document in anticipation of the expected protests.

The part of the report made public includes assessments on 420 parcels of real estate, including those owned by several charitable institutions and the Boston Consolidated Gas Company, these being the heaviest holders.

The largest items include: Mount Vernon Congregational church $3000; Home for Women $6540, Boston Consolidated Gas Company $5305, P. H. and Emily B. Shepard, 514 and 516 Beacon street, $1500; Camaliel Bradford $1750.80, William H. Wellington, 520 Beacon, $1200; former Gov. Eben S. Draper, 150 Beacon, $1440; Francis L. Higginson, 274 Beacon, $1650; University Club, 270 Beacon, $1710; Henry L. Higginson, James J. Storrow, trustee, Mary Lee Blake, 39 Brimmer, $660.

These assessments are based on the cost of the Charles river embankment, minus the cost of the marginal conduit, which was paid for by the city. This conduit was constructed to take care of sewage that formerly emptied into the Charles river.

SEE TAFT AND STIMSON AS THE TICKET IN 1912

WASHINGTON—There has been a good deal of discussion this week about the Vice-Presidential nomination on the Republican side, owing to the letter written by Vice-President Sherman to Wilbur F. Wakeman, apparently taking himself out of the list of availables.

Mr. Sherman in the Wakeman letter indorsed an editorial in the American Economist, the official organ of the high tariff Republicans, opposing Canadian reciprocity and the lowering of the duties of the tariff law, and lined himself up with the high protection sentiment of the Republican party. Inasmuch as the Republican national convention promises to be controlled by low tariff men, who will write a platform in accordance with these views and renominate Mr. Taft, who is a low tariff man, it seems clear to party leaders in this city that Mr. Sherman cannot expect to be a candidate to succeed himself as Vice President.

How to manage so as to bring strength to Mr. Taft and to the party generally in the person of the nominee for second place is the question that is being asked and answered in this city. The first thing one hears is a renewal of the old-time demand that the Republican ticket must come from Ohio and New York.

Mr. Taft will be the Ohio representative on the ticket and it is interesting as indicating the probable importance of the 43 electoral votes New York will have in the electoral college next time, to observe that party managers are inclined to believe that Mr. Sherman's place on the ticket next year ought to be taken by some other man from that state. Henry L. Stimson is the man most frequently mentioned in that connection. Ever since Mr. Stimson entered the cabinet there has been more or less discussion of him as a vice-presidential quantity, and it has been renewed since

PRESIDENT TO VETO STATEHOOD BILL AS RECALL WAS LEFT IN

(By the United Press)

WASHINGTON—Because of the provision in the Arizona constitution for the recall of the judiciary, President Taft will veto the bill admitting that territory and New Mexico to statehood as soon as the measure reaches the White House, it was said today on good authority.

The bill was passed by a vote of 53 to 18 last night by the Senate.

President Taft has contended all along that he would be glad to sign the statehood bill if the Nelson amendment prevailed, but that it was a question whether he would be willing to sign it if the amendment were defeated, as it was, by 43 to 26.

QUINCY DREDGING CONTRACT IS LET

The contract for dredging the basin off the Quincy Yacht Club has been awarded to the Bay State Dredging Company by the harbor and land commissioners.

The commission has set apart $5000 for this work, 10 per cent of which was contributed by members of the club. When the work is finished the basin will enable yachts to come to the floats off the clubhouse at all times.

EVERETT TAX RATE $19.60

BULLETIN

ETAMPES, France—Jules Vedrines, winner of the Paris-Madrid trophy and second in the 1010-mile circuit race of England and Scotland for the prize of $50,000, broke all records today for sustained flight.

With the announcement that word was received today from Lincoln Beachey, practically insuring his appearance at the Squantum aviation meet in a Curtiss type aeroplane, America's prospects of winning the meet became much brighter.

By his daring and originality Beachey has made a prominent place for himself in aviation circles. Harry N. Atwood, who is his chief competitor for the premier position in American aviation, has already signed contracts with Manager Claflin of the Harvard-Boston meet. The keen rivalry between the two is going to afford some spectacular flying, it is said, for the aeronautical enthusiasts of Boston.

Lee Hammond, a pupil of Capt. Thomas Baldwin's school at Mineola, L. I., has announced his intention of entering with one of Baldwin's machines. He received his aviator's license from the Aero Club of America a few days ago and will fly in Chicago next week.

Spectators at the coming meet will find the seating arrangement and position of the course altogether different from what they saw on the Squantum field last fall.

The stands have been removed and their place taken by comfortable tilted-back benches. The fence in front of the stands has been moved forward about 70 feet. The intervening space is to be used for standing room.

Five speed cross country flights are to take place besides the big long distance race on Labor day. They are to be of 20 miles minimum distance each way. At first it was planned to keep the routes secret until the day of the race, but the protests of the entrants, who wish to look over the ground first,

DECIDES FOR BOSTON IN Q. A. SHAW TAX DISPUTE

Judge Jenney of the superior court found today for the city of Boston in the suit of Francis C. Welch and other executors of the will of Quincy A. Shaw, for an abatement of a tax of $274,116 on the estate of Shaw.

His finding is in favor of the executors and against the other municipalities that claimed a share of the tax in the actions for abatements of the amounts paid under protest as follows: Brookline $30,697, Milton $10,236 and Beverly $73,174.

The question at issue was whether Boston was entitled to a tax on the entire estate, or whether the other municipalities were entitled to such portion of the property as was distributed to the beneficiaries living in those places.

The court made a formal finding on an agreement statement of facts, and reported the case to the full bench of the supreme court, which will determine the questions of law raised.

The executors turned over the estate to themselves on Jan. 27, 1910, and later made a distribution to the beneficiaries. Boston alleged that the transfer in January was not operative, and that on April 1, 1910, when the assessors imposed the tax, the property was still in the hands of the executors as the property of the Shaw estate, so the tax was binding.

The city claimed the transfer could not be made and the executors could not free the estate from liability of a tax until their accounts had been allowed and they had been discharged as executors. Their accounts were not allowed until August, 1910.

The other municipalities contended that the transfer by the executors to themselves as trustees and the distribution of the estate was effective, and that the share of the beneficiaries living in Milton, Brookline and Beverly was subject to the tax in those places.

Judge Jenney found in favor of the city of Boston under a decision in Hardy vs. Yarmouth, in which it was held that there was no distribution of the estate of Joshua Sears until the executors' accounts had been filed and allowed.

EMPEROR OF JAPAN THANKS MR. TAFT FOR TOGO WELCOME

WASHINGTON—Admiral Count Togo left here today for Baltimore and Philadelphia. Formally, his visit was brought to a close Tuesday night with a reception at the Army and Navy Club, prior to which he was dined at the Metropolitan Club by Beekman Winthrop, acting secretary of the navy.

A reply from the Emperor of Japan to the address of President Taft to Admiral Togo was received at the White House today. The Mikado's message follows:

"The splendid welcome accorded by you to Admiral Togo and the friendly sentiments expressed by you on that occasion have touched me very deeply, and I pray you to accept this assurance of my most cordial thanks and appreciation.

(Signed) "MUTSUHITO."

The admiral paid a formal visit to both houses of Congress Tuesday and thanked the members for his cordial reception in this country. In both the Senate and the House he was enthusiastically applauded, each chamber taking a recess to allow the members to shake his hand.

QUINCY SCHOOLS TO EXHIBIT

QUINCY, Mass.—The closing session of the classes of the Quincy summer schools was held Tuesday. An exhibition of the physical culture class will be held Thursday and the work of the other classes will be exhibited in city hall Friday.

MR. PERKINS FREED FROM DISCLOSING CAMPAIGN FUNDS

WASHINGTON—Representative Stanley (Dem., Ky.), chairman of the Steel investigating committee, reversed his ruling today and decided that he would not attempt to force George W. Perkins to answer the committee's questions regarding contributions to political campaign funds.

For his refusal Mr. Perkins was threatened until this afternoon with arrest by the House officers and with a jail sentence for contempt of Congress. With Mr. Stanley's reversal of his previous ruling, it was decided that the subject would be dropped and Mr. Perkins put on the witness stand for further examination.

The committee passed a resolution, however, directing Chairman Stanley to demand the books of the steel corporation and its subsidiaries and in case of refusal to take legal steps to get them.

When the committee met before noon it went at once into executive session and Chairman Stanley and the Democrats were insistent that Mr. Perkins answer the questions put to him regarding campaign contributions and the Republican committeemen were just as strongly opposed to forcing him to reply.

Representative Young (Rep., Mich.), ranking minority member of the committee, who led the fight for Mr. Perkins in the executive session, declared when a recess was taken for luncheon that he was convinced that Chairman Stanley intended to change his ruling which required Mr. Perkins to answer the questions.

Speculation as to the final vote of the committee on the proposition of haling Perkins before the bar of the House centered largely about the probable attitude of Representative Littleton (Dem., N. Y.), whose views were not known. A single vote would have determined the issue from a political point of view, the committee being composed of five Democrats and four Republicans.

Mr. Perkins was promptly on hand

COUNCIL CLIPS $1200 FROM BILL OF GOV. FOSS EXPERT

The amount of the bill presented by Clinton H. Scovell, expert accountant, for services rendered in investigating state departments under direction of Governor Foss was reduced by the Governor's council today from $4390.14 to $3189.58.

The $1200.06 was stricken out by the council, it is said, on the ground that Mr. Scovell had charged exorbitantly for services of experts in his employ.

Mr. Scovell's bill is said to have called for a regular daily payment for each expert in his employ engaged in the investigation plus an overhead charge of 60 per cent of the day's pay.

The sub expert is said to have received his daily pay, while the overhead charge was to go to the firm. The council allowed Mr. Scovell as overhead charge $1 per man per day instead of the percentage asked. This percentage amounted to $3 and upward per day per man, according to daily pay of the expert.

LINER CANOPIC IS RELEASED

Released from quarantine the White Star line steamer Canopic, Captain Carter, pushed up to her berth at Hoosac docks, Charlestown, this afternoon, with her 206 cabin passengers on board and 200 Portuguese who were in the steerage, leaving about 1090 steerage passengers detained at Gallup's island.

BIGGER CARS FOR CAMBRIDGE SUBWAY

Cars to be used by the Boston Elevated Company in its fast trains through the Cambridge subway when finished are to be similar to the present tunnel trains, but longer and wider, being about 72 by 9½ feet.

It is expected the new Cambridge subway, which tunnels under Beacon hill and the Park street station, stopping beneath the junction of Tremont and Winter streets, will be completed so far as the contractors' work is concerned in a month. It will then be ready for the installation of the escalators, the granolithic platforms and the tiling. The Boston Elevated forces will probably be at work on this end of the subway within two months.

The Elevated's men are working in the Cambridge section of the subway installing the equipment of ballast, tracks, wiring and other fixtures. The Boston section of the subway is complete from the entrance into Beacon hill to a point a little more than 100 feet east of Beacon street so far as the contractors'

EXPLORERS HAD PUBLICITY POET

Interests of Colony at Jamestown Were Promoted in Old World by Descriptive and Expository Pen of R. Rich

The seventh paper in the series of Wednesday articles on early American literature reviews a document dealing with events before referred to. The wreck of the Sea Venture, which is supposed to have given Shakespeare the idea of "The Tempest," figures in two pieces of writing of the plantation period, in the prose narrative of Strachey which has been discussed; and in a poem, which is the subject of today's sketch.

AMONG the earliest Virginian writers there is but one poet. He goes under the name of R. Rich. He is not to be confounded with Robert Rich, Earl of Warwick, who was a shareholder in the Virginia Company; but he was a gentleman by birth, and, as we learn from a casual phrase of his own, a soldier. He was a passenger with Sir Thomas Gates in 1608, and part of his poem describes the wreck that Strachey wrote about. The larger portion, however, is written to correct false impressions of the Jamestown colony and to encourage emigration. Rich is known to have sailed with Newport for England, intending to return but here all trace of him is lost.

There is believed to be but one copy of the original editton of his work, called "News from Virginia," in existence. This was discovered in 1864 in an obscure compilation of tracts, and was soon after reprinted in a very small edition. One other edition, of only 25 copies, and intended for private use, was issued in London in 1874. But the tract has never been in public circulation. It is interesting for its "newes" of the Virginia colony, but more so because of its peculiar characteristics as verse, and, as the preface to the London reprint says, for "its sublime unconsciousness of ridicule." The writer was too deeply imbued with the importance of his subject, and his own responsibility as scribe, even to dream of ridicule.

The title of the poem is given in full, that this rare document may be presented in due form.

Writer Introduced

"Newes From Virginia. The Lost Flocke Triumphant. With the happy arrival of that famous and worthy knight Sr. Thomas Gates: and the well reputed and valiant Captain Mr. Christopher Newporte and others in England. With the maner of their distresse in the Iland of the Bermoothawes, where they remained 42. weekes, and builded two Pynaces, in which they returned to Virginia. By R. Rich, Gent., One of the Voyage. London. Printed by Edw. Allde, And are to be sold by Ione Wright, at Christ-Church dore. 1610."

His own preface gives the introduction to his poetical effort:

"Reader, how to stile thee I knowe not, perhaps Learned, perhaps un-, learned, happily captious happily envious; indeed what or how to tearme thee, I know not, only as I began I will proceede.

"Reader, thou dost peradventure imagine that I am mercenarie in this business and write for money (as your moderne Poets use) hyred by some of those ever to be admired adventurers to flatter the world.

"No, I disclaime it. I have knowne the voyage, past the danger, seene that honorable work of Virginia, and I thanke God am arrived here to tell thee what I have seene, don, and past. If thou wilt believe me, so; if not, so to; for I cannot force this but to thine owne liking. I am a soldier, blunt and plaine, and so is the phrase of my newes; and I protest it is true.

"If thou asks why I put it in verse, I prethee knowe it was onely to feede mine owne humour. I must confesse, that had I not debard myselfe of that large scope which to the writing of prose is allowed, I should have much eased myselfe, and given thee better content. But I intreat thee to take this as it is, and before many daies expire, I will promise thee the same work more at large.

"I did feare prevention by some of youre writers, if they should have gotten but some part of the newes by the tayle, and therefore though it be rude, let it passe to thy liking, and in so doing, I shall like well of thee; but, however, I have not long to stay. If thou wilt be unnaturall to thy countryman, thou maist,—I must not lose my patrymonie. I am for Virginia againe and so I will bid thee hastily farewell with an honest verse.

"As I come hether to see my native land,
To wafte me backe lend me thy gentle hand.
Thy loving country-man. R. R."

There are reasons for believing that the "work more at large" was written and published, but no copy is known to be extant.

Adventures Chronicled

". . . It is no idle fabulous tale, nor is it fayned newes;
For truth herself is here arrived, because you should not muse.

"With her both Gates and Newport come to tell Report doth lye,
Which did devulge unto the world that they at sea did dye.

"Tis true that eleaven months and more these gallant worthy wights
Was in the shippe Sea Venture nam'd deprived Virginia's sight.

"And bravely did they glyde the maine till Neptune 'gan to frowne,
As if a courser proudly backt would throw her ryder downe.

"The seas did rage, the windes did blowe; distressed were they then;
Their ship did leake, her tacklings breake, in daunger were her men.

"But heaven was pylatte in this storme, and to an iland nere, Bermoothawes call'd, conducted them, which did abate their feare.

"But yet these worthies forced were, opprest with weather againe,
To run their shippe between two rockes, where she doth still remaine.

"And then on shoare the iland came, inhabited by hogges,
Some foule and tortoyses there were; they onely had one dogge. . . .

"And there two gallant pynases did build of seader-tree;
The brave Deliverance one was call'd of seaventy tonne was shee.

"The other Patience had to name, her burthen thirty tonne. . . .

"The two and forty weekes being past they hoyst sayle and away;
Their ships with hogs well freighted were, their hearts with mickle joy.

The English-men opprest by grief and discontente in minde. . . .

"And in the midst of discontent came noble Delaware
He heard the griefes on either part and sett them free from care.

"He comforts them and cheeres their hearts that they abound with joy:
He feedes them full and feedes their soules with God's word every day. . . .

"And to the adventurers thus he writes be not dismayed at all,
For scandal cannot do us wrong God will not let us fall.

"Let England knowe our willingnesse, for that the work is good,
Wee hope to plant a nation where none before hath stood.

"To glorifie the lord 'tis done and to no other end;
He that would crosse so good a worke to God can be no friend."

Business Agent Revealed

The verses succeeding these explain that there is no fear of hunger in the colony, and recite, in moving rhyme, the wealth of fish, fowl, venison, nuts, berries, the country affords. They enumerate, too, the various kinds of valuable wood to be found in the forests, and hold out a cunning hint of iron. And then, the Muse departing farther and farther, alas! as R. R. grows more businesslike, he tells what will be done—in hard cash, so to speak—for any who are willing to believe his news, and try living in the colony.

"Then, maugre scandall, false report or any opposition,
Th' adventurers doe thus devulge to men of good condition,

"That he that wants shall have reliefe be he of honest minde,
Apparel, coyne, or anything to such they will be kinde.

"To such as to Virginia do purpose to repair;
And when that they shall hither come each man shall have his share.

A house and garden-plot shall have; besides, 'tis further ment

"That every man shall have a part and not thereof denaid
Of general profit, as if that he twelve pounds ten shillings paid.

"And he that in Virginia
Shall copper coyne receive,
For hyer or commodities
And will the country leave

"Upon delivery of such coyne unto the Governour, Shall by exchange at his returne be by their treasurer

"Paid him in London at first sight,
No man shall cause to grieve,
For 'tis their generall will and wish
That every man shall live."

The end of the honest effusion comes suddenly at last in the next verses:

"The number of adventurers that are for this plantation,
Are full eight hundred worthy men, some noble, some of fashion.

"Goode, discrete, their work is good, and as they have begun,

GENERAL FIRMIN HAS GIVEN UP CLAIM TO HAYTI PRESIDENCY

PORT AU PRINCE, Hayti—General Firmin has renounced his claims to the Haytian presidency in a letter to local newspapers.

General Leconte has promised to permit his former rival to land here after the election Thursday. The steamer Caravelle, on which General Firmin is staying, will return to the capital Aug. 13. It left there Tuesday afternoon.

All foreign property here is well protected by General Leconte's personal order to the chiefs of the different divisions.

The chief of police personally arrested Tuesday afternoon several vagrants who threatened to pillage American property where the MacDonald stores are warehoused.

The authorities at Cape Haitien have issued a warning against any disorder in the neighborhood of the foreign consulates, stating that any one committing an act of violence in that quarter will be severely punished.

THIRD VETO SENT BY GOV. BALDWIN

HARTFORD, Conn.—Governor Baldwin's third veto was sent to the lower branch of the General Assembly Tuesday. It related to the regulating of fares on the New Haven road, where zones have been established giving reduced rates.

The direct primary and advisory, initiative and referendum bills were defeated. Adjournment is still far off, as there are 400 measures still to be acted upon by the House.

TRIP DAUNTS SUBURBANEER

High Hat and Dress Coat Emblems That Contradict Out of Town Ease

WHEN Edward Randolph prepared a paper about the state of affairs in Massachusetts for Charles II. in 1680 he referred in it to Boston's inhabitants as Bostoneers. Taking this as a model, let us speak of those that live in the suburbs as suburbaneers. The word has more to commend it than "suburbanite," which latter is not a word of dignity and implies a sense of one's being hopelessly embedded in the suburbs; it is a word of inveterate position; we seem to say, once a suburbanite always a suburbanite, whereas when we speak of a friend as suburbaneering there is a pleasant ring of adventure about it, like mountaineer, and frontiersman and musketeer. We recognize, to be sure, that this subject is one of extreme delicacy, for some there are that are quick to see a fling at the suburb-dweller in any reference to the territory adjacent to a city. But we are quick to disclaim any such intention; kind hearts and strong beat in the suburbs as in the city's mazy labyrinths and some very remarkable characters have been formed in that more open land where the milkman is a family friend and the postman can keep a critical eye on one's foreign mail. So when we express distaste for the word "suburbanite" we by no means belittle the suburbaneer, if almost for the reason that it is hard to say who is one. Our point simply is that "suburbanite" sounds too much like Adullamite, or Redmondite or any other ite that some like and others may not.

Division Lines Lost

In the good old days when the city was the city, the suburbs the suburbs and the country nothing but country, a place where the urban cow had not grown accustomed to the bouquet of petrol and men read but one newspaper an hour, one could tell quite easily what the several divisions were and where they began and ended. If men lived in Boston or Brentford, they lived in a well defined area out of which they did not move very much. Equally, if men lived in the suburbs, they were literally that, being settlements at the foot of or next to the cities. If they lived in the country, that meant a place where their livelihood, their interests, their political functions were all disposed and they had no thought of another field of activity. But the motor car, the electric trolley car and the railway have quite changed the relations of areas and with them the conduct of one's daily occupations. With this change sprang upon the stage before the eyes of an appreciating and delighted world, the suburbaneer, the man of country and town. He is of a great variety of aspects and though it would not be courteous to say that he had peculiarities, it is fair to say that he has his idiosyncrasies, his contradictions, like all his fellowmen. One of them is that he has two political natures; one belongs to the suburb or outlying town in which he sleeps and the other to the city in which he does all his work and which is under the greatest debt to him for its prosperity. One very pleasant result of this is that instead of thereby acquiring a right to vote in two places he is saddled with a double load. But we trench too much on politics.

Conventions Accepted

A feature of the career of the suburbaneer is that though he lives near the rose he seldom or never gets it. The rose in this case is the full flavor of city life, a flavor that is not surpassed by anything of its sort in the world. If one does not like it, there is an end to it, but if he does like the many conventions that go to make up a city's everyday affairs, the customs, the constant exchange of ideas and the tolerated distractions that men in the cities seem to have agreed upon as necessary, then, when he goes to the suburbs, a man must consent to forego all these. A very instructive table of figures might be composed to contrast the average duration of a dress-suit in the city with that of the same thing in the suburbs. The same attention might be paid to the statistics of top-hats. In the case of the city of Boston a comparison with the country or the suburbs would give somewhat misleading figures, as in the capital of New England the top-hat is worn only by distinguished visitors or travelers that have had their usages formed in foreign lines. The inhabitants of Boston themselves do not wear this useful and graceful article of dress as they seem to think that it possesses a meretricious brilliance not in keeping with that somber dignity that ever has distinguished the Bostoneers.

It is a pity that this should be so, for on a winter's morning when the sun shines out of the cloudless, hard, blue sky the effect of a couple of hundred men wearing well brushed top-hats would be incomparably brilliant and impressive in Boston's thoroughfares. If they were found to be too brilliant, a rough cloth briskly applied would soon remedy the fault. But in the case of dress-suits the situation is different, because it is common knowledge that not a few responsible, careful men in Boston wear dress-suits, not of course in the morning, but after the Gun has gone down. One may say that by this time the custom is fairly established in Boston, though of course there are conservatives that still hold out against the innovation. When at one of the Boston playhouses there is presented one of Sir Arthur Pinero's delightful little pictures of the home or Mr. Shaw is prevailed upon to break a long and constitutional silence, one nowadays may see plenty of dress-suits, although the custom of wearing brown boots with them is one to which he must grow accustomed.

Station Is Rally-Point

Now the suburbaneer is by force of circumstances a brown boot man. His it is, when he has shaken off the cinders from his clothes, roused himself from the wooing temperature of the railway car, thrown the evening newspaper on the floor, grasped his bag, eight yards of Canton flannel and his laundry, to step out and into the debonair and luscious mud with which the streets of his adopted suburb are thoughtfully paved. For this reason the suburbaneer must wear brown boots; though they may not be mud-evaders they are mud-harmonizers, being made of leather so cunningly tanned that its color is that of good mud. The reader will note that the mud provided by railway companies to border their stations is of a black hue, this being done in deference to serious-minded people that wear black boots and the occasional butterfly in patent leathers. But the suburbs and the country call for brown leather; not all the cut of the most ineffable West end bootmaker could turn out anything that could look fresh in the suburbs if it were in black leather. Again, the suburbaneer's dress things last longer than they do in the city.

It is no reflection on him that they do, but the circumstances are such that they get little wear. He breakfasts long before the sun has risen, and working his way down to the station in the mysterious gloom he can exercise his imagination on what the country may be like, while coming home in the dark it is too late for him to see. It will be seen from this that the suburbaneer can spend little or no time upon the delights of what the poet has described as the light, fantastic toe. It is perfectly clear to all practical men of common sense that one light, fantastic toe would not be enough for any hard-working man that was not a member of the Russian ballet corps, and even with 20 at his disposal and with all the good will in the world, if he went in for mazurkas, country dances and two-steps his sleeping hours would be very much restricted. So he does not dance much save in the way of kindness, and when he does stay in town to go with his wife to the play it is with one eye on the stage and the other on the timetable, and a feeling of approaching coolness about the legs as he thinks of the winds and blowing sleet about his storm-swept station, and the fact that he has put on dress trousers.

Yet there comes a season when the suburbaneer ceases from troubling about the mud and the last train; it is that happy time when he gets a day to himself at home, when the soft breezes blow across the piazza and move the clean window curtains, when his wife calls his attention to all sorts of remarkable flowers about to burst into bloom, when she with noble liberalness tells him that she has ordered onions with the steak, when the new Maltese kitten approaches him with becks and wreathed smiles inviting him to liliputian romps and when the city with its self consciousness and noise are sunk in distance. Then the suburbaneer needs no defense.

MR. MEYER TO SEE DOCKS OF BRITAIN

LONDON—The British admiralty has allowed George Von L. Meyer, secretary of the U. S. navy access to the British dockyards and informed him that the officers will be glad to show him round and let him see everything that he wishes.

The secretary will meet Reginald McKenna, first lord of the admiralty, and other officials of the admiralty today.

MONITORIALS

By NIXON WATERMAN.

UPPER CLASS

"Riches have wings," and when installed
In airships it shall sail about,
The wealthy class will still be called
"The aerostocracy," no doubt.

THERE is often a striking difference between possibilities and probabilities; yet there is always the possibility that what can be will be. Last year a plan was proposed by the people of the state of Iowa that "the best dirt road that can be made by grading and drainage," leading across the state from "river to river" — a distance of 380 miles—should be built in a single day. A good road convention was called and a month later the idea had crystallized into a fact. On a certain day agreed upon, 10,000 men, none of whom received a cent in the way of compensation, put into first-class condition this 380-mile road.

And therein is much food for thought. Supposing that the United States government should suddenly find itself (because of the world-wide adoption of the international peace plan) without any excuse whatever for maintaining its present navy and standing army of say 100,000 men. It would be hardly the right thing for it to turn this vast army of men out into the world with nothing at hand to do. It would have a bad effect on the labor market. Well, since 10,000 Iowans put 380 miles of highway into first-class condition in one day, ten times as many drilled men could do ten times as much in a day—3800 miles. At the same rate this would mean in round numbers 22,800 miles of good road completed each week, or 1,185,600 miles a year.

Supposing these men were to devote themselves to road building for as many years as they have already been employed as soldiers, who can picture to himself what splendid condition the highways of the land would then be in? Or supposing the labor of all the men now in the army and navy, and all the money now spent for forts and warships and for the maintenance of the army should be for the next 20 years applied to the building of model homes for working people, public buildings, playsteads, parks and other objects of use and beauty, would not the result be "worth while?"

But the field for "supposing" is one that is almost boundless in extent. Supposing that all the time and money that is now being devoted by the many thousands of men and boys throughout the land, as players and on-lookers of the game of baseball could be applied to public betterment of towns and cities and communities; what would come of it? But, as was stated above, there is a wide difference between possibilities and probabilities.

UP TO DATE

The game of "Authors" as it's now
Played by "them literary fellers"
Is for each one to find out how
To be among "the six best sellers."

THERE is a charm and a sense of hidden power about figures that is little short of entrancing. Mathematics, although esteemed most exact, appeals none the less to the imagination. While it is an established fact that "figures will not lie," they can, by adhering to incontrovertible facts, tell many a story that is as wonderful as anything to be found in the whole world of fiction. Was there ever a prudent, thrifty parent who did not call his son's attention to the compound interest tables wherein it is set forth that $1 at 24 per cent compound interest will in one hundred years amount to $2,551,799,404? The earning power of a dollar for even a much shorter time and at a much lower rate of interest is somewhat amazing to one who is unfamiliar with the accumulative growth of figures.

No doubt nearly every one has heard the story of the man who went to the smith's shop to have his span of horses shod, and who, when he asked the smith how much he would charge for the work was told by the smith that he would be glad to drive the first of the 64 nails necessary for fastening on the eight shoes, for half a cent, the second for a cent, the third for two cents, and so on, doubling the price of each nail to be driven. At first the proposition sounded first-rate to the man who was about to have his horses shod, but when he began to figure the matter up he soon learned that the price for shoeing the span would be somewhere away up in the millions of dollars.

Figures have one trait that is well worthy of emulation: Once they are set to work, as in the matter of drawing compound interest, they do not cease in well doing. They work automatically. This is why there is so much truth in the saying that "it takes money to make money." Unlike many men, money does not grow weary of working. A man who earns a certain amount in one day says to himself: "Now, by keeping at it every working day in the year I can make 313 times as much, and in 20 years, 20 times as much again." But the likelihood is that he will stop working pretty soon and go to spending the money he earned in other years. Perhaps it is just as well that men cannot reduce the matter of their daily employment and its reward to an exact predetermined plan.

INDEPENDENCE

Now, since the women have gone into business and refuse
To marry impecunious men, there comes the welcome news
the way socks used to do.
So once again the men are rather independent, too.

LIBERALS INDORSE RECIPROCITY PLANS AT BROCKVILLE, ONT.

BROCKVILLE, Ont.—At the Liberal convention held here Tuesday a pro-reciprocity resolution offered by John M. Gill, a manufacturer, was enthusiastically adopted.

Mr. Gill is a Liberal, but had been popularly credited with opposing reciprocity in common with the majority of Canadian manufacturers. His action is characteristic of the straightening of party lines, which shows that Liberal manufacturers are generally overcoming their early aversion to the policy. Another manufacturer also a Liberal, W. C. MacLaren, spoke in favor of reciprocity.

The Liberals unanimously renominated for member of Parliament George P. Graham, Canadian minister of railways and campaign manager for the party. The Conservatives at their convention nominated John Webster, a produce merchant, who was beaten by Mr. Graham by a majority of only 144 at the last general election in 1908.

Andrew Broder, Conservative member for Dundas, appealing to the Conservative electors to fight reciprocity, declared it would not benefit the Canadian farmer, because for the last five years the price paid for hops in Canada was higher than in the United States. Therefore the new market, he contended, offered slight attraction, but the removal by reciprocity of the Canadian duty on hogs would expose Canadian farmers to competition from the United States.

At about the same moment only two blocks away Mr. Graham was reading market reports of the last five years showing that the price of hogs had averaged slightly higher in the United States than in Canada.

WINNIPEG, Man.—Frank Oliver, minister of the interior, arrived Tuesday to open the reciprocity campaign in the West. The minister said:

"In the present election reciprocity is the question. From the representation of Quebec in the House, there is no doubt that Quebec outside of Montreal is strong for reciprocity."

SCHOONER ELENA IS FIRST TO CROSS LINE OFF BRENTONS REEF

CLOSELY PRESSED

NEWPORT, R. I.—The schooner Elena of the New York Yacht Club and owned by M. F. Plant was the first to cross the finish line off Brenton's reef lightship this afternoon on the final day's run of the annual 1911 cruise of that club from New Bedford.

She arrived shortly after 1 o'clock, finishing a run of 27 miles. She was closely followed by two other schooners of class A and one of class B. Shore observers were unable to make out the names of these yachts.

The first sloop to cross the line was the Istalena.

Big banks of Cuttyhunk fog that tried to block off the New York Yacht Club fleet from entering Buzzards bay Tuesday had disappeared when Commodore C. Ledyard Blair started the yachts today on the final run of the cruise to Newport.

The fleet, however, was in no hurry to leave, after yesterday's long jaunt from Montauk Point to Padanaram harbor. Most every one took the opportunity of snatching a few additional hours of sleep.

Those who were on deck early spent the time in visiting among the fleet and talking over yesterday's experiences, especially the close struggle between the Elena and Westward. Every one seemed to admit that Captain Dennis of the Plant yacht had won a notable victory in working out of the clutch with which the Westward apparently held the Elena for more than four hours. That the two class A fliers are very evenly matched was generally recognized today.

Many of the yachtsmen also paid their respects to Commodore C. Ledyard Blair and congratulated him on the success of the cruise, which after yesterday's run was practically assured. The commodore remarked that he had been only learning the different ropes this year and if he had a chance next year, he would endeavor to arrange for more wind. He was also inclined to credit much of the success of the cruise to his board of strategy, consisting of Fleet Captain Franklin A. Plummer, Fleet Surgeon George A. Dixon, M. D., Secretary George A. Cormack and Capt. Willis Terry.

In heading for Newport, the yachts were given a racing run of 27 miles, from the start at Wilkes ledge off the Dumplings light, 10 miles down Buzzards bay to Vineyard sound lightship, then 17 miles over to the finish at Brentons reef lightship, about which hover so many pleasant yachting recollections. Tomorrow will come the annual race for the Astor cups, while on Friday the sixth race for the King's cup will be sailed, and the big three-masted schoners Atlantic and Karina will start for the Brenton's reef cup, with a race to Ambrose channel lightship off New York and return.

Massive productions of the old English silversmiths were handed over the side of the schooner Irolita, owned by E. Walter Clark of Philadelphia, and the Seneca, owned by Demarest Lloyd of Boston, and the sloop Istalena, owned by George M. Pynchon of New York, as the result of a long but interesting and at times exciting run Tuesday of the fleet from Fort Pond bay at the end of Long island, to this port.

It was the sloop Istalena that led the fleet over the finish line and to a night's anchorage off the New Bedford summer resort of Padanarem. It was the big schooners Elena and Westward, however, that furnished the real sport of the day, for a longer and more hotly contested race has seldom been sailed by two such large yachts, while the margin at the finish in favor of the former was only 37s. in elapsed and 16s. in corrected time.

The Elena and Westward, which kept in the center of the sound, had a hard struggle getting through the fleet of small yachts. But they were so engaged in their own duel that they paid very little attention to the others. The Westward beat the Elena by nearly 2m. at the start and held her advantage until nearly noon. Then clever work by Captain Dennis put the Elena in the lead by a couple of cable lengths. Half an hour after the Westward worked out ahead, the Elena took the lead again and at no time was there more than a quarter of a mile between them. Finally off Seaconnet the Elena luffed out on the weather of the Westward and then crawling out ahead, bore off for the finish with just time enough to save her allowance over the Cochran boat.

Half the racers had gained the harbor by sunset, but a lot of the little sloops did not come in until well after dark. The summary:

SATURDAY TENNIS SERIES PLANNED FOR ARLINGTON

Club at the Heights Will Hold Events Beginning This Week and Ending on Labor Day

The tournament committee, comprising C. R. Boggs, E. W. Perley and E. L. Shinn, has issued a circular announcing the tournaments of the Arlington Heights Tennis Club for the season of 1911.

A series is to be held from Saturday, Aug. 12, to Labor day, Sept. 4, in two classes, viz.: Class A (men) and class B (men). The following list make up class A: M. A. Bridgham, Waldo Sutcliffe, C. R. Boggs, E. Winfield Perley, A. D. W. Prescott, H. M. Perley, H. Meade, W. M. Lloyd, George Lloyd and P. M. White. All the other entries form class B.

A silver cup is offered as the prize of the winner in the championship singles, and may become the permanent property to the one winning it for two years, whether consecutively or not. W. M. Lloyd, a class A man, has won the cup one year and will defend it again this year. There will also be a prize for the class B contestants.

The rules say that the matches shall be the best two out of three advantage sets, except in the finals, which shall be the best three out of five.

Saturday the champion singles will be played off by both class A and class B, while on Aug. 19 the gentlemen's doubles will be held.

Jackson of Cleveland stands up to the plate very much like Cobb and he takes a hard, fast swing at the ball that sends it through the infield with lightning speed.

Three shutouts in the big leagues yesterday and all of them in the National. Cincinnati, Pittsburg and Brooklyn were the winners at the expense of Boston, Philadelphia and St. Louis.

—ooo—

Lowell looks like a sure winner of the New England league pennant this year, as it has a seven and one-half game lead over its nearest rival, Worcester, and is now playing fast ball.

—ooo—

Two bases of balls and two hits was Lajoie's record for yesterday. Six hits in seven times up for the last two days gave the big first baseman a chance to climb up nearer Cobb in the batting standing.

—ooo—

Last chance to see Cleveland today until Sept. 15. With Lajoie back in the lineup, the western team looks pretty strong and will bear watching the rest of the year. The game is scheduled for 3 instead of 3:15.

—ooo—

The New York Americans pushed Detroit down in the American league standing yesterday by taking both games of a double header. It was the third time this season that New York had cleaned up a double header.

—ooo—

Pittsburg gave Philadelphia its worst defeat of the season when the latter was shut out by a score of 13 to 0. The Pirates got 12 hits for a total of 16, and yet Wagner failed to get a safe one in three times up.

—ooo—

Four ex-Boston Americans are in the first four positions in the batting standing of the American Association. Cravath leads with .367 Grimshaw is next with .366, Hickman next with .357 and Sullivan fourth with .349.

—ooo—

The Boston and New York firemen play the second of their annual baseball games on the Huntington avenue grounds next Saturday. New York won the first game of the series in New York, 7 to 5, and the Boston team is going to try to tie up the series. Last year the Boston team won its home game, 5 to 3.

Canadian Rifleman Who Captured Two Prizes in British Shoot at Bisley

PRIVATE W. J. CLIFFORD
Winner of King's and Prince of Wales' trophies

BISLEY TOURNEY FOUND CANADA HEAVY WINNER

Among Prizes Won by Canadians Were King's, Prince of Wales' Prizes and the Bronze Medal

(Special Correspondence of the Monitor)

LONDON—The annual National Rifle Association's meeting was brought to a close recently, when the great event of the meeting, the King's prize, was won by Private W. J. Clifford of Canada, with a score of 319 out of a possible 355. The score is one of the lowest ever recorded; when, however, the somewhat untoward and unusual weather conditions are taken into account it is by no means an unpraiseworthy one.

It was the hottest Bisley ever has known, and never once during the whole fortnight was there one drop of rain. Consequently in a country where such things are not reckoned on or provided for, these conditions do not tend to produce record scores.

This was a Canadian Bisley, for besides winning the greatest event of all, Canada has won two other important items, the Prince of Wales' prize and the bronze medal. They also won a bronze cross and the silver medal in the aggregate prizes.

On Friday the King's silver medal was won by Private Garrod of Oxford University, the national trophy by England, and the all-comers aggregate by Lance Corporal Gray of the fifth Scots.

In the shooting between the Lords and the Commons, the latter were victorious.

ALEXANDER SIGNS FOR THREE YEARS

PHILADELPHIA — Grover Alexander, the sensational young pitcher of the Philadelphia Nationals, has affixed his signature to a three-year contract with the club, which, according to President Horace Fogel makes him the highest-priced pitcher in either the National or American league.

While Fogel refuses to mention the figure, he acknowledges that the contract calls for something more than $7500 a season, and this for a youngster who has not yet completed a season in major league baseball.

The three-year contract was handed to Alexander three weeks ago, but he refused to sign it until he had discussed the matter with Dooin. The manager, who is at home, advised him to affix his signature, and today the contract arrived at headquarters.

DIXIE IV. WINS YACHT RACE AT FRONTENAC, N. Y.

Defender of Cup Gets Easy Victory Over Motor Boats Without Being Pressed for Speed

FRONTENAC, N. Y.—Representing the Frontenac Yacht Club, the Dixie IV., defender of the Gold Challenge cup this year, easily won the opening event in the Gold Challenge cup races of the American Power Boat Association here Tuesday. Although the swift craft's four-bladed double propellers were hitting only 850 of the 1100 revolutions a minute of which they are capable, the race became a procession after the first lap of seven miles. A choppy sea prevailed in which the newest creation in motor boat racing circles behaved in a way that augurs well for America's chances in the Harmsworth cup races later in the month.

After hours of work over her strut, the Dixie IV. was lowered into water only 16 minutes before the starting gun. Frederick Burnham, at the wheel, was caught down the river too far and the Dixie got away more than two minutes behind the Skipper, representing the Chippewa Bay Yacht Club. Inside of the first seven miles, however, the Dixie secured the lead. The Hornet, representing the Syracuse Yacht Club, and the Wasp, representing the Thousand Islands Yacht Club, encountered engine trouble and withdrew. The Dixie covered the 28 miles in 49:45—slow time on account of her not being pressed. The Skipper finished second. The Mit II., representing the Thousand Islands Yacht Club, was third.

CUBAN TENNIS PLAYER WINS IN MAPLEWOOD PLAY

MAPLEWOOD HOTEL, Maplewood, N. H.—Play in the second round of the Maplewood tennis championship on the Country Club courts was completed Tuesday. The best match was the one between C. M. Phinny, Jr., a young Cornell tennis player, and F. Pla of Havana, Cuba. The latter won after three hard sets. Another good contest came out in the match between G. G. Tarbell of Winchester, and J. A. Atwood of Yale, the former finally winning out. The summary:

FIRST ROUND

J. R. Scott, New York, defeated F. A. Shields, Jr., Albany, 6—1, 6—3.
C. M. Phinny, Jr., New York, defeated E. S. Tilton, New York, 6—1, 6—1.

SECOND ROUND

Scott defeated D. Lamson, East Orange, 6—2, 6—0.
G. G. Tarbell, Boston, defeated J. A. Atwood, Yale, 6—0, 5—7, 6—1.
F. M. Burgess, Woodstock, defeated E. Tilton, Jr., New York, 6—3, 6—0.
F. Pla, Havana, Cuba defeated C. M. Phinny, Jr., New York, 6—3, 6—8, 6—4.

M'LOUGHLIN WINS PLACE IN SEMI-FINAL ROUND AT NEW YORK

PELL ALSO VICTOR

NEW YORK—M. E. McLoughlin of California won his way into the semi-final round of the New York state singles championship tournament Tuesday by defeating L. E. Mahan, the former Columbia University champion, two sets to one, 5—7, 6—2, 6—3.

This match was the leading feature of the singles on the turf courts of the Crescent Athletic Club at Bay Ridge, and held a large gallery interested throughout the earlier games. A close second to it was the contest waged through the limit of three deuce sets in the fourth round, in which T. R. Pell defeated R. H. Palmer 7—5, 5—7, 9—7. In the deciding set each of the contestants was several times within a stroke of the match before Pell was successful in bringing it off.

F. B. Alexander and H. H. Hackett, the national and state champions, managed to win a hard match in the doubles. They defeated O. H. Hinck and Henry Torrence, Jr., at 9—7, 8—6. Alexander was experiencing one of his off days. As a result Hinck and Torrence took all kinds of daring chances against him with fair success, so that they led at 5—4 on games and 40—30 on points in the first set. They were three times within a point of winning before the champion pair saved themselves.

G. F. Touchard and R. D. Little, the challengers for the national title, proved to be in excellent form. They won two matches in easy fashion in the last, defeating G. S. Groesbeck and P. Cummings at 6—4, 6—2. The summary follows:

NEW YORK STATE CHAMPIONSHIP,
MEN'S SINGLES

Fourth round—T. R. Pell defeated W. M. Hall, 7—5, 5—7, 9—7.
Fifth round—M. E. McLoughlin defeated L. E. Mahan, 5—7, 6—2, 6—3.

MEN'S CHAMPIONSHIP DOUBLES

Second round—R. D. Little and G. F. Touchard defeated R. W. Seabury and G. H. Middlebrook, 6—1, 6—1; T. R. Pell and L. E. Mahan defeated M. H. Long and C. R. Gardner, 6—4, 2—6, 6—2.
Third round—C. M. Bull, Jr., and H. C. Martin defeated S. H. Voshell and F. C. Baggs, 6—2, 4—6, 6—3; R. D. Little and G. F. Touchard defeated G. S. Groesbeck and P. Cummings, 6—4, 6—2; T. R. Pell and F. B. Alexander defeated O. H. Hinck and Harry Torrance, Jr., 9—7, 8—6; T. R. Pell and L. E. Mahan defeated Dr. B. F. Drake and H. S. Stiles, 6—2, 6—3; A. S. Cragin and J. C. Tomlinson, Jr., defeated R. H. Palmer and Dr. William Rosenbaum, 5—7, 8—6, 7—5.
Fourth round—T. C. Bundy and M. E. McLoughlin defeated A. S. Cragin and J. C. Tomlinson, Jr., 6—0, 6—3; G. M. Church and Dean Mathey defeated W. A. Campbell and H. B. Bretz, 6—4, 8—6.

ROYAL YACHTS WIN AT RYDE

RYDE—The regatta here, which is international and which was opened Monday, was marked Tuesday by two royal victories. The Kaiser's yacht Meteor won the international cup for yachts of class A, and King Alfonso won the international cup for yachts of 15 meters with his Hispania.

ernor to the superior court bench was confirmed by the executive council today. He was present in the Governor's office while the council was in session and on learning of the confirmation of his appointment tendered his resignation as chairman of the railroad commission.

The council also confirmed the appointment of the three other superior court judges named by the Governor last week—John B. Ratigan, Hugo A. Dubuque and Patrick M. Keating.

Senator Arthur L. Nason of Haverhill was appointed by the Governor today chairman of the commission authorized by the recent Legislature to investigate the cold storage system in Massachusetts.

The other members of this commission named today by the Governor are: George F. Mead of Lexington, Francis Batchelder of Everett, F. Spencer Baldwin of Boston, David W. Murray of Hyde Park.

Henry Sterling, a Boston labor leader, and Mrs. Eva W. White and Warren W. Foster, also of Boston, were appointed to the new homestead commission.

Frank C. Richardson of Essex, chairman of the executive committee of the Democratic state committee, and Charles G. Rutter of Lawrence, were appointed to the new insurance board of appeal.

Sketch of Mr. Macleod

Frederick J. Macleod is a native of Prince Edward Island, Canada. After graduating from Dalhousie College, Halifax, N. S., in 1890, he entered the senior class of Harvard College, graduated with the class of 1891 and received the degree of A. M. in the following year. During the next two years he continued his work in the Harvard graduate school.

After leaving the Harvard graduate school in 1894 he spent two years in teaching English, the first year as professor in Mercersburg College, Pennsylvania, and the second year as instructor in the State University of Nebraska.

Having decided to take up the practise of law, Mr. Macleod entered the Harvard law school in 1896 and graduated in 1899. In the same year he was admitted to the bar and began the practise of law at 53 State street, Boston, with the firm of Stimson & Stockton. Later he engaged in independent practise in the same offices until about four years ago, when he removed to his present location at 15 Beacon street. After his admission to the bar he resided in ward 11, Boston, until 1903, when he removed to Cambridge, and two years later was elected to the state Senate and served two years.

Mr. Macleod was elected a member at large of the Democratic state committee in 1908, and on the organization of the committee in January, 1909, was elected chairman. At the beginning of this year Mr. Macleod retired as chairman, and since then has been devoting himself to his law practise.

Mr. Macleod is a former president of the Harvard Canadian Club, former secretary and vice-president of the Victorian Club, former secretary of the membership committee of the Good Government League of Cambridge, a member of the Canadian Club of Boston, president for the past three years of the Intercolonial Club of Boston, past chief of Clan Sutherland, member of the Royal Clan, and counsel for the order of Scottish Clans and a member of the Scots Charitable and the British Charitable Societies. He is a member of many other social and fraternal organizations, including the Masons, Elks and Odd Fellows and the Colonial Club, Economy Club and Citizens Trade Association of Cambridge. He also served for five years in the First Corps Cadets, M. V. M.

Campaign Progressing

Representative Norman H. White's entry today into the stump-speaking contest between the three rival candidates for the Republican gubernatorial nomination brings the state campaign from the Republican viewpoint into full swing.

Mr. White this afternoon opens his tour of speech-making at Holyoke, where he is to be the guest of the Elks of that city at their annual clambake.

Speaker Joseph Walker, continuing his campaign of the central part of the state, opened in Douglas early today. He expects to speak briefly at Webster, Southbridge, Oxford, Auburn, Leicester, Spenser and North Brookfield during the course of the day, and again at Worcester this evening.

The campaigning by Lieutenant-Governor Frothingham will be temporarily suspended today to enable him to attend the meeting of the executive council at the State House. Later in the day he will confer with his political lieutenants regarding further developments in his campaigning.

BAR HARBOR TAX RATE OPPOSED

BAR HARBOR, Me.—Circulars have been sent out by a committee of summer resident taxpayers to voters of the town and members of the summer colony relative to the steady annual increase of the town's tax rate, which at $34.50 on $1000 is at present probably the highest in New England.

MR. CASSIDY IS OUT OF RACE FOR SECOND PLACE ON THE TICKET

Thomas F. Cassidy of Adams, Democratic candidate for lieutenant-governor last year, in a conference with Governor Foss at the State House today told the Governor that he would not be a candidate for the position at the coming election.

According to reports Mr. Cassidy informed the Governor that he believed that by right the nomination for lientenant-governor should be given to him again this year without opposition, as he had been a candidate for this office only one year and had made a creditable showing, losing the election by only a little over 8000 votes, out of a total of some 400,000 cast.

Governor Foss is understood to favor the nomination of David I. Walsh of Clinton. Mr. Cassidy is said to have told Mr. Foss of reports current that Mr. Walsh is to be on the state ticket which Governor Foss and his friends are understood to be drawing up.

Against the Governor and his candidate, Mr. Cassidy is said to have declared he would have no chance to receive the nomination, and consequently withdrew his candidacy under protest.

BRITAIN OPPOSES PERSIAN USE OF MAJ. C. B. STOKES

TEHERAN, Persia—Great Britain has informed the Persian government that if Maj. C. B. Stokes, the British military attache at Teheran, is to be employed in northern Persia, this government ought not to persist in the proposed appointment of Mayor Stokes as head of the treasury gendarmerie, and if it does persist Great Britain will recognize the right of Russia to take what steps she thinks necessary to protect her interests in northern Persia.

W. Morgan Shuster, the American treasurer-general, states that, unless the treasury gendarmerie is organized quickly Persia will be bankrupt. He requested the services of Major Stokes, he says, because he was the only man available knowing the language and the country.

The former Shah is now near Barfrush and his plan seems to be to join Salar Ed Dowleh and march on Kasvin, 90 miles northwest of Teheran.

The former Shah's second force is marching from Shahrud, 200 miles northeast of here, and the rumored battle near Damghan, where the former Shah is said to have captured the town, had been expected.

PARTY PLEASING G. F. WILLIAMS

WASHINGTON—George Fred Williams of Dedham, Mass., was at the capitol on Tuesday, where he met Chairman Underwood, Representative James of Kentucky and other Democrats of the Senate and House. He has been visiting near Annapolis and journeyed to Washington for an opportunity to observe the situation at closer range.

He expressed himself as gratified with the Democratic procedure of recent months. The Democratic leadership in Congress he regards as admirable—the best, if not the only real, leadership the Democratic party has had in Congress for a long period.

He spoke highly of Governor Foss, whose reelection next autumn he regarded as a foregone conclusion.

DENIES REPORTS OF FISH MERGER

"The New York firm of Fayles-Zahn, as far as I know, does not own the Boston Fisheries Company, and there are no negotiations at present to purchase the Bay State Fishing Company, which operates the steam trawlers Spray, Ripple, Foam and Crest out of Boston."

This statement was made today by John R. Neal, president of the Bay State Fish Corporation, when he was questioned in regard to a report that the New York firm is trying to form a fish merger here. Mr. Neal said that representatives of the firm in question discussed the subject with him a week ago, but this is as far as the project has gone.

NO AGREEMENT ON WOOL BILL

WASHINGTON—Although Senator La Follette declares his conviction that there will be a wool tariff revision bill at this session, both he and Representative Underwood of Alabama acknowledge that they are no nearer an agreement on the measure.

The conferees who were named a special sub-committee to attempt a reconciliation of the Senate and House wool and free list measures held a two hours' conference on Tuesday, but could find no common ground on which to agree. Another conference will be held Thursday.

GROCERS ON ANNUAL OUTING

CITY CONCERT FOR ROXBURY

A concert is to be given tonight at the Columbus avenue playground in Roxbury. The concert will begin at 8 o'clock and will be conducted by D. G. Cericola.

MR. DONAHUE READY TO FILE FIRST PAPERS FOR A STATE OFFICE

The first nomination papers to be filed with the secretary of state by candidates in either party for places on the state ticket will be filed today by Frank J. Donahue, candidate before the Democratic primaries for secretary of state.

Mr. Donahue, who was a candidate in the Legislature against Secretary A. P. Langtry, has on his papers more than 4000 names, which are said to embrace a major portion of the prominent Democrats of the state, including nearly every Democratic member of the Legislature and those of every Democratic mayor in the commonwealth except Mayor Fitzgerald.

Mr. Donahue will contest Edward O. Skelton of Dorchester, a prominent Grand Army man, for the nomination. According to Mr. Skelton, Governor Foss urged him to be a candidate against Mr Donahue.

SEEK TO RESTORE HISTORIC SPRING

In connection with the demolition of the old building at Spring lane and Devonshire streets, where workmen are now excavating for a foundation for a new 10-story office building to be erected for the Minot heirs, it is proposed by Mrs. N. V. Titus, president of the Massachusetts Society of Daughters of 1812, that the famous old spring, from which the thoroughfare takes its name shall be reopened.

Mrs. Titus and others desire the placing by the side of the new building of a rough cobble stone fountain, with a statue of Governor Winthrop above it, as the spring was almost at the governor's door and at one time was known as the Winthrop spring.

RAILROAD WANTS BOND REFUNDED

PORTLAND, Ore.—A sworn statement, showing that the Mount Hood Railway, Light & Power Company has expended a total of $260,000, has been filed in the office of the city auditor by William N. Porter, secretary and treasurer of the corporation.

This was done, he explained in a letter to the mayor and council, in order that the company's bond of $50,000, required by the terms of the franchise giving it authority to operate in the city, may be withdrawn.

This provision required that the corporation should post such bond until it had expended not less than $250,000.

MAINE RAILROAD SOON TO BE SOLD

AUBURN, Me.—The Eustis railroad is to be sold at auction on Aug. 24 at the Auburn courthouse by the receiver, Seth M. Carter, Esq. The supreme court, in ordering the sale, fixed the price at not less than $40,000.

The Eustis railroad is 15 miles long, narrow-gauge, and its business is mostly lumber freight. It connects with the outside world at Eustis Junction with the Sandy River and Rangeley Lakes railroad.

SUNLIGHT ARRIVES WITH OIL CARGO

In tow of the tug John J. Tummins, the British steel bark Sunlight, Captain Crowley, left port today for New York where she will load 800,000 gallons of crude oil for one of the six ports in Spain, probably Seville.

After discharging her oil she will go to Queenstown, Ireland, for an overhauling after which she will proceed to Macoris, San Domingo, to bring more molasses to Boston.

VANCOUVER TO HAVE NEW LINE

VANCOUVER, B. C.—According to the representative in this city of the Chicago, Milwaukee & Puget Sound railway, which is the name under which the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railway is operating its extension to the Pacific Coast, this company will build into Vancouver at an early date. The preliminary surveys have already been made, and according to the official the trains of this company will be running on its own rails into this city.

RUSH WORK ON BATTLESHIPS

Three shifts of workmen are rushing work on the battleship Georgia and completing repairs on the New Jersey at the Charlestown navy yard. The Nebraska is due soon to come from the fleet, and will have the new type of 12-inch guns substituted for its present armament.

RADCLIFFE CLASS OF 1910 REVIEWS WORK OF A YEAR

In a pamphlet just issued by the Radcliffe College 1910 class an account is given of what each 1910 graduate has achieved during the first year out of college.

The larger number of girls have adopted teaching as a vocation. But it is found that against the names of 30 members of the class, or about one third, is recorded "at home," which means, in many cases, "waiting for the wedding bells."

Three of the class are married, and there are two class babies to attend future reunions.

Six have gone into settlement work. Lucy Fletcher is a visitor for the Associated Charities of Buffalo, N. Y.

Thirteen girls pursued their studies further, several studying at Radcliffe for degrees. Several others are studying music.

Managing a tea room at Sweetbriar College, Virginia, was the occupation chosen by Jane Blood, and the venture, unique in the history of Radcliffe College graduates, was entirely successful, the young woman proving that college education aids rather than diminishes business ability and tact.

The only member of the class to take a political position was Alice Yeager, who passed the civil service examination and was appointed to a secretarial position in the State House.

TEST WIRELESS FOR AEROPLANES

WASHINGTON — Efforts are being made by the navy department to perfect a system of wireless communication between shore stations and aeroplanes, recognized as destined to play an important part in any future war.

Captain Mayo, commandant of the Mare Island navy yard, has been authorized to conduct experiments with models of aeroplanes suspended in the air and equipped with wireless outfits to determine whether or not the frame of an airship will act as a "ground" for the type of wireless apparatus used by the navy, and permit communication with the shore. Attempts are to be made to send a message to the stations at San Francisco and Yerba Buena, Cal.

INVITE VISITORS FOR INSPECTION

Trustees of the floating hospital have distributed invitations for an inspection of the vessel Friday between 11 a. m. and 3 p. m., while it is at anchor in Marblehead harbor. A launch will be at the disposal of the visitors and will run from the landing of the Eastern Yacht Club every few minutes. Should unfavorable weather conditions arise, the inspection will be postponed to Aug. 15.

The boat went today to Castle island and carried 258 passengers on her trip—67 mothers and 19 children. The day was in memory of the Rev. William Howard Faulkner, the subscriber being the Girl's Friendly Society of St. Pauls Episcopal church, Boston.

STORM-STAYED VESSELS SAIL

A long procession of vessels, including barks, schooners, tugs, barges and other craft, left port today after being held here for several days by unfavorable weather conditions. A dozen of the large ocean tugs, some of which have been here since Saturday started out towing strings of three barges each.

The procession began shortly after daylight and continued until Nantasket roads was comparatively clear of vessels. In Vineyard sound the detained boats also got under way and rounded Cape Cod on the way to Boston.

RECEPTION FOR DELEGATES

WAKEFIELD, Mass.—Charles F. Parker Camp, U. S. W. V., and Mrs. Edmund Rice Auxiliary gave a reception Tuesday night to the delegates who will represent Massachusetts at the coming national encampment.

SECRETARY NAGEL ATTACKS GARY PLAN TO CONTROL PRICES

HOUGHTON, Mich.—Charles Nagel, secretary of commerce and labor, in an address Tuesday at the quarter centennial celebration of the Michigan College of Mines, attacked the recommendation of Judge Gary, chairman of the board of directors of the United States Steel Corporation, that the federal government should exercise control over the prices of commodities.

The secretary vigorously denounced agitation for radical departures from the present governmental and industrial system of the United States. He said:

"It is all very well to say 'let the government fix prices, then they can be made low enough for us,' but when we undertake to fix prices for the consumer we must of necessity fix prices for the producer; then we must fix conditions and wages in the factory and the result is the government controls every industry, and when it controls it it owns it."

CHILDREN ENJOY A PICNIC OUTING IN FRANKLIN PARK

Boston's 12 settlement houses united under the name of the Boston Social Union this afternoon to give their younger children the biggest, gayest picnic of the year at Elm Hill grove in Franklin park. For weeks the little girls have been rehearsing steps and figures of the dances presented. Special cars conveyed the 216 girls and 197 boys to the scene of the festival. Recreation and a good social time was the object of the afternoon's program rather than athletic competition. Races there were in plenty, but of the three-legged, sack and potato variety. While the boys contested in these the girls executed quaint little folk dances that had been prepared under the direction of Miss Emily Bab of the Boston Social Union.

REVISED ACTION FOR CAMBRIDGE BONDS PROPOSED

The Cambridge city council will meet this evening in special session to take new action upon several bond issues which were recently authorized. The meeting is held at the request of the American Bonding Company, which was not satisfied with the wording of the order providing for the bond issue.

The company took exceptions to the fact that the previous special meeting was brought about through notices sent by mail to the different members. It recommended that notices be delivered by a constable or other legally authorized persons. This has been done in serving notices for tonight's meeting.

Another objection of the company was that the order passed by the city council called for a loan to run 10 years, while the bond issue was made for 20 years. These discrepancies will be corrected in tonight's meeting, after which the bond issue will be made.

CHELSEA TAX RATE IS DOWN TO $21.80

Ivory R. Allen, chairman of the Chelsea board of assessors, has announced that the tax rate for the present year will be $21.80 per $1000. This is a reduction of 60 cents from the rate of last year.

Chairman William E. McClintock of the board of control says that if the present policies are carried out the rate will be as low as $19 within five years.

SAUGUS, Mass.—The tax rate for the coming year will be $25.60 on $1000. This is the highest in the history of the town and an increase of $3.60 over last year.

NAHANT—The Nahant tax rate this year will be $8. This is a decrease from last year and one of the lowest rates in the state.

BALDWINSVILLE, Mass. — The tax rate for 1911 is $20.25 per $1000, a decrease of 25 cents from last year.

ATHOL, Mass.—The tax rate is $20.90 on $1000, an increase of 40 cents from last year.

BROCKTON, Mass.—The assessors announced this noon that the tax rate for 1911 is $20.10. This is a reduction of 20 cents on last year's rate. The real estate and personal valuation amounts to $2,982,254. The increase in the number of polls is 806.

RANDOLPH, Mass.—The new tax rate is $18.60 on $1000, a reduction of $3.70 from that of 1910.

MAINE SOLDIERS' CAMP IS VISITED

AUGUSTA, Me.—The muster field was visited by quite as many today as on Tuesday when the second regiment went through its evolutions. Lieut. Edwin Butcher of the United States army, who is acting as instructor, has already begun his duties. Lieut. Thomas Crystal of the United States fifth infantry is also present as an instructor.

MAINE CENTRAL SHOPS BURN

CALAIS, Me.—The Maine Central railroad roundhouse and shops, together with nine engines, were destroyed by fire today. Loss $110,000.

MR. PERKINS FREED FROM DISCLOSING CAMPAIGN FUNDS

when the committee assembled and it was announced that an executive session would be held to consider his case and also the enforcement of certain demands for books of the Steel corporation's subsidiaries.

The specific question which caused the trouble was asked by Representative Beall of Texas. He was endeavoring to force Mr. Perkins to tell in detail the political affiliations of the United States Steel Corporation and its methods of attempting to influence legislation.

"Has the United States Steel Corporation," asked the Texan, "ever contributed either directly or indirectly to the campaign of any politician?"

"I do not believe it has," said Mr. Perkins.

"You have stated to this committee that the New York Life Insurance Company, of which you were an official, did contribute to political campaign funds. Did that company keep a record of such expenditures in the minutes of its finance committee?"

"I advised the witness not to answer," said Mr. Richard Lindabury.

"Upon advice of counsel I decline to answer," said Mr. Perkins.

REDUCING SECOND CLASS MAIL WOULD SAVE SAYS EXPERT

NEW YORK—Charles H. McBride, an expert on the railway mail service, was on the witness stand throughout Tuesday at the hearing before the commission on second class mail rates.

Justice Hughes asked how much more second class mail matter could be handled without increasing expenses materially. Mr. McBride said that there might be a slight increase along certain lines, but that a general increase would demand additional men in the mail cars to handle the larger volume of matter. In answer to a question put by Justice Hughes—how much the total cost of the railway mail service would be reduced by a decrease of second class matter by 50 per cent—Mr. McBride answered that it would be difficult to give an estimate offhand, but that he believed it might decrease the cost by 25 per cent.

SALVATION ARMY BEGINS BUSINESS

WORCESTER, Mass. — The annual congress of the officers of the Swedish Salvation Army of the East opened its first business session here today, following a public meeting Tuesday evening at the Quinsigamond barracks. The principal speakers were Brig. Olof Nilason of New York and Maj. Chris Christopherson of Boston. It was announced that practically every officer and delegate to the congress had arrived.

SEE MR. TAFT AND STIMSON AS TICKET FOR 1912 CAMPAIGN

Mr. Stimson did not succeed in his contest for the governorship last year, but it is pointed out that he was not the only Republican state leader who lost in that contest. One inspiration of the Stimson talk comes from knowledge that he would have the support of the Roosevelt wing of the party and of the progressives of the country generally, for he is a progressive. If it was good politics to put him in the cabinet, why, it is asked, would it not be better politics to put him on the presidential ticket with Mr. Taft? His acceptance of the nomination would, it is argued, tend to unite the Republican factions for the purposes of the campaign.

Another inspiration for the Stimson talk grows out of a review of previous presidential campaigns in which the Republican party was successful when it headed its ticket with citizens of Ohio and New York, beginning with the Hayes and Wheeler campaign of 1876, which ticket pulled through with a majority of one with the assistance of the report and decision of the returning board.

In the succeeding presidential campaign in 1880 the Republican ticket was made up of Garfield of Ohio and Arthur of New York and it was successful. Then came Harrison of Indiana and Morton of New York with the same pleasing result. In 1892, when the Republicans lost the presidency, the vice-presidential candidate was Whitelaw Reid of New York, who was brought up in Ohio. In 1896 McKinley and Hobart represented Ohio and New York respectively, for while Hobart was a legal resident of New Jersey he was a New York business man of the type described by Woodrow Wilson—those who do their thinking in New York and their sleeping in New Jersey.

In the second McKinley campaign a legal resident of New York was nominated for vice-president in the person of Theodore Roosevelt. Then came the Roosevelt and Fairbanks ticket in 1904 and while Mr. Fairbanks is a citizen of Indiana he was born in Ohio and grew up there. In 1908 Mr. Taft and Mr. Sherman again represented Ohio and New York on the presidential ticket, respectively.

With this conjunction of Ohio and New York in national campaigns on the Republican side it is small wonder that Mr. Taft's friends are now telling him that his running mate next year must come from New York and that his new secretary of war is the proper person for the place.

VETO BILL GOES UP TO LORDS AGAIN BUT MINUS AMENDMENTS

LONDON—When the veto bill comes before the House of Lords today from the Commons it will have been shorn of the vital amendments made in its previous passage through the Lords.

Latest estimates give 80 lords for the bill and 70 against it, but the Conservatives claim that they have gained several additional supporters.

A lengthy debate is expected lasting until Thursday night.

Lord Roberts has announced that he will vote against the bill.

By a vote of 282 to 68, the House of Lords Tuesday night carried a motion made by Lord Curzon censuring the government for having obtained from the King a promise to create sufficient peers to pass the veto bill, should that measure be rejected by the upper house.

The motion was similar to that of Arthur J. Balfour, the opposition leader, which was lost in the House of Commons by a majority of 119.

With the result a foregone conclusion, the debate in the Lords Tuesday night caused little interest.

The Earl of Crewe in opposing the motion caused a distinct surprise by admitting that the members of the government were not all of one mind with respect to the creation of new peers

He said King George regarded the plan "with legitimate reluctance" and that it depended upon the action of the House of Lords whether the government would be compelled to create new peers.

The veto bill made its final appearance in the House of Commons Tuesday afternoon before being sent back to the lords. There was a crowded house. The diplomatic, peers and ladies' galleries were filled when the debate, which was interrupted by violent scenes on July 24, was resumed on a motion to consider the Lords' amendments to the bill.

Lord Hugh Cecil's motion that consideration of the bill be postponed was rejected 348 to 209 and a motion to commence consideration of the Lords' amendments to the veto bill was then agreed to.

The Unionist newspapers today comment keenly on two incidents of Tuesday's debate on the bill in both Houses of Parliament, the first, Home Secretary Churchill's announcement of the government's intention to pass the Irish home rule bill during the present Parliament; and, second, the admission of the Earl of Crewe in the House of Lords that the ministers were not of one mind regarding the creation of peers.

Mr. Churchill stated that when the ministers conferred with the King in November, in regard to guarantees, he was made fully acquainted with all matters in dispute between the parties, "among which home rule was one of the most important."

have caused Manager Claflin to publish them beforehand.

On days when there are no cross-country flights speed contests of 10 miles minimum distance will be held over the field course. In all the races this year time will be taken at the start from the firing of a bomb. Contestants will take flight at minute intervals thereafter. This will mean that the element of competition will be much more obvious. Contestants will be practically bunched at the start and finish.

It has been specified in all contracts with entrants this year that they must be in the air during the last few minutes of every day. Nothing more picturesque has ever been attempted in the management of a big flying meet. It will mean that at twilight each evening between 20 and 30 aeroplanes will be soaring aloft at once like a great flock of crows.

NEW YORK—With the arrival of Wilbur Wright in New York from abroad today an announcement is expected as to the part the Wrights will take in the Chicago aviation meet which opens Saturday.

REPUBLICANS PLAN ANNUAL OUTING

Everett Republicans are to hold their annual outing Aug. 19 at Bass Point, Nahant, when the three Republican candidates for Governor will appear together for the first time this season in behalf of their respective campaigns. Besides Lieut.-Gov. Louis A. Frothingham, Joseph Walker and Norman White, Senator W. Murray Crane is expected and a letter has been received from Senator Henry Cabot Lodge to be read at the meeting.

BAY STATE NEWS BRIEFS

WALTHAM

The Republican city committee has announced that it will name a candidate for the mayoralty to oppose P. J. Duane, Democrat, by the end of the week.

Property owners on River street are signing a petition to be presented to Mayor Walker protesting against the use of oil as a dust layer on the street.

LEXINGTON

Lexington's share of the state tax is $11,605, the same as in 1910. This is the highest it has ever been in this town.

Before the schools open in September, every schoolhouse in town will be thoroughly cleaned, the desks will be varnished and the floors oiled.

READING

Traders day will be observed by the Merchants & Business Men's Association Aug. 16, and business will be generally suspended throughout the town. This year there will be no outing, the association having decided that it is best to let the members and their families spend the day as they choose.

CHELSEA

A. D. Murray, the new physical director at the Y. M. C. A., will begin his duties about Sept. 1. He will move here from Methuen.

The annual field day of the Cary Boys Club is to be held at North Reading Aug. 26.

BROOKLINE

The Rev. Wallace Iliffe will spend the month of August at Antrim, N. H.

A building permit has been issued to Robert M. Goode of Newton to erect in Brookline two brick three-apartment houses at 281 and 283 Tappan street.

MALDEN

The Republican city committee has appointed committees to have charge of its annual outing at the Brenton at Nahant.

Papers for Louis A. Frothingham for Republican candidate for Governor have been filed by Arthur W. Merriam of the city committee with City Clerk Leverett D. Holden. This is the first set of papers of any of the state candidates to be filed.

WAKEFIELD

H. M. Warren camp, S. of V., and the S. of V. auxiliary will have an outing at Lynn beach this evening.

The Men's Club and Smith Bible class of the Union church will have an outing at Bass Point Friday.

A regatta on Quannapowitt lake is being planned for Saturday by the Quannapowitt Yacht Club.

NEWTON

Representatives Thomas W. White, George H. Ellis and Henry E. Bothfeldt have filed nomination papers for the office which they now hold. Mayor Hatfield has filed verification papers as a member of the Republican state committee from the first senatorial district.

ARLINGTON

During the absence of the pastor, the Rev. John Blewett of Somerville, the pulpit of the Trinity Baptist church will be occupied by these preachers: Aug. 13, the Rev. C. E. Eaton of Boston; Aug. 27, the Rev. Mr. Christie of Providence, R. I.

FRANKLIN

Mrs. Adelbert D. Thayer has presented the public library with 47 books, all fiction.

A postal savings bank will be established here Aug. 14.

CAMBRIDGE

The exhibition at the closing of the vacation schools will take place next Friday in the Rindge manual training, English high, Webster, Putnam, Roberts and Shepard schools.

MELROSE

Thomas J. Hawkes, assistant chief of the fire department, is in charge of the department during the sojourn of Chief Joseph Edwards at Orleans.

School Committeeman Frank L. Welt has announced his candidacy for reelection to the school board. Chairman Edwin S. Small has announced that he will not be a candidate for reelection and Victor A. Friend, a prominent merchant and president of the Board of Trade, is mentioned as his successor.

WINTHROP

The Corinthian Club series of midsummer races at Marblehead, which start today, are open to all interclub classes and several boats from the Winthrop Yacht Club will be entered, including the Idalia of Commodore David M. Wiseley, Baron III. of Ralph C. Goudy, Anita of H. P. Skates, Buster of Mr. Stronberg and the boats of former Vice-Commodore Hodges and Charles Allen. The open regatta of the Winthrop Yacht Club is to be held Aug. 19.

EAST LEXINGTON

There will probably be a change in the fire apparatus here when the new automobile combination hose and chemical apparatus is placed at the central engine house.

ARLINGTON HEIGHTS

The Sunshine Club will be entertained this afternoon by Mrs. Abbie Fletcher, at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Worthen.

DINNER TO GRANGE FROM WORCESTER

LEXINGTON, Mass.—A dinner was given by Lexington grange, Patrons of Husbandry, in Historic hall today, in honor of a delegation from the Worcester Pomona grange. The dinner was in charge of Mr. and Mrs. Bernard F. Baker.

A committee of 10 from the local grange escorted the party around town, visiting various points of historical interest. The delegation leaves tonight on the boat for Portland, Me., planning to make the return trip by trolley.

ASSERTS ICE FIRM HAS LOST MONEY

NEW YORK—Further evidence intended to show that the wholesale ice business in New York is unprofitable was introduced at the resumption Tuesday of the district attorney's investigation of the Knickerbocker Ice Company.

Theodore S. Dickerson, treasurer of the Merchants Union Ice Company, a concern of $100,000 capital, testified that his company had lost about $12,000 this year, up to July 1. Since then he thought it had "lost a few more dollars."

W. R. C. READY FOR ROCHESTER TRIP

Mrs. Nellie F. Libbey, department president of the Woman's Relief Corps, has nearly completed arrangements for the trip to the national convention, which will be held in Rochester, N. Y., this month.

Headquarters of the department of Massachusetts will be at the Seneca, which will also be the headquarters of the National G. A. R. and W. R. C. and of the department of Massachusetts, G. A. R.

TENNESSEE CITY HAS NEW BANK

MEMPHIS, Tenn.—The Metropolitan Bank & Trust Company, capitalized at $500,000, is the most recent addition to the financial bulwark of this city. Former Mayor Joseph B. Williams and other men of Memphis are the incorporators.

NEW ENGLAND'S RAILWAY POSTAL SERVICE STUDIED

Members of a commission consisting of George F. Shaw of Washington, John C. Koons, superintendent of the railway mail service of Chicago, and Hardy T. Gregory, postoffice inspector at Washington, are in Boston today, investigating the first division of the railway mail clerks service, which covers all New England.

The purpose of this investigation is to make the service uniform and simplify office methods. Each member of the staff was interviewed relative to his respective duties and notes were taken. When the investigation is finished recommendations will be made to inaugurate changes where necessary.

It is considered that the present system of filling out blanks in connection with every transaction is somewhat laborious.

This investigation will also serve to obtain ideas for the establishment of a fourth division near Oklahoma.

BLUEFISH SWARM OFF MANHATTAN

NEW YORK—A school of bluefish, extending several miles in and between Ambrose and main ship channels, was brought in at flood time Tuesday afternoon, as far as Fts. Hamilton and Wadsworth. Fishermen ran sea nets around large numbers of the fish. The fish were very large, of the ocean type, which run up to 10 and 12 pounds each.

Bluefish have seldom passed through the narrows, as they are partial to clear and clean water. Commercial fishermen account for the present extraordinary run of bluefish by insisting that they have deserted European waters, where they are said to have gone about five years ago.

SENATOR FRYE PASSES AWAY

LEWISTON, Me. — William Pierce Frye, United States senator from Maine, passed away Tuesday at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Helen White, in this city. Senator Frye had resigned as president pro tempore of the Senate at the opening of the present special session of Congress and soon afterward came to Lewiston, which always had been his home.

Senator Frye was the son of Col. John M. Frye, one of the earliest settlers and most prominent men of Lewiston. His grandfather, Joseph Frye, was a colonel in the British army, and later a general in the revolutionary war on the American side.

At the age of 15 Senator Frye entered Bowdoin College, and was graduated from that institution at the age of 19 in the class of 1850. He then read law.

Early in his legal career Mr. Frye evinced a fondness for political action. His first elective office was obtained in 1861 when he was chosen to represent Lewiston in the lower house of the Legislature. Here he served for three years.

In 1866 Mr. Frye became the mayor of Lewiston and served the city for two terms. While yet in the mayor's chair he was elected attorney-general of the state. In 1871 he was elected a representative to the forty-second Congress, which position he held until 1881.

He was promoted to the United States Senate in 1881 and at once took a front rank in debate and influence.

Mr. Frye was reelected to the Senate in 1883, 1888, 1895, 1901 and 1907, and his last term would have expired in 1913. He was chosen president pro tem of the Senate Feb. 7, 1896. Reelected Dec. 4, 1899, he served until March 4, 1900. He was again chosen to the position March 7, 1901, and served until April of the present year, when he tendered his resignation.

Among the bills which Senator Frye introduced into the Senate were measures aiming at the relief of American shipping, the incorporation of a national railway, the establishment of an ocean mail service, permission of the use of domestic materials in shipbuilding, and the amendment of the law relating to the regulation of steam vessels.

Mr. Frye married Miss Caroline Speare of Rockland, Me., a daughter of a noted family of that city. Mrs. Frye passed away in December, 1900. Of the two surviving children Helen married Wallace Humphrey White of Lewiston and Alice married Frank H. Briggs, a prominent business man of Auburn, Me.

TENDENCY TO KEEP EXPERIENCED MEN FOR DIPLOMATS

WASHINGTON—Charles Page Bryan of Illinois who was appointed ambassador to Japan yesterday by President Taft is said today to be one of the few diplomats who have represented the United States at foreign posts for a period of 15 years without once uttering anything, according to the records, which has caused even the slightest criticism. It is felt that his personality and calm and easygoing manner will please the Japanese.

It had been understood that the appointment would go to Charles H. Sherrill, minister to Argentina, who recently resigned.

Mr. Sherrill was at the White House only a few days ago, and it became known that the Tokio post had been offered to him, but it was learned that he declined because of advantageous business connections which he has established since his return to the United States from Buenos Aires.

Mr. Bryan, who is a graduate of the Columbian law school here, served in the Illinois Legislature before being appointed minister to China, in 1897. He did not go to Peking, and was appointed to Brazil in 1898. He was made minister to Switzerland in 1902, minister to Portugal in 1905, and has been minister to Belgium since December, 1909.

That Larz Anderson, the new minister to Belgium, was slated for a diplomatic appointment was one of the shrewd diplomatic guesses of several months' standing.

Mr. O'Brien's transfer from Tokio to Rome shows the tendency to retain men in the diplomatic service who have been found suitable. Of the 10 ambassadors now in the service eight have had previous diplomatic training.

MR. TAFT TO APPEAL TO PEOPLE IF SENATE DELAYS PEACE PACTS

WASHINGTON—President Taft, it is said today, will appeal direct to the people if the Senate refuses or too long delays ratification of the arbitration treaties with Great Britain and France, which are now pending in the Senate. His speech at Mountain Park Lake, Md., was the first warning of this.

If the President finds it advisable there will be other direct appeals to the people, and the country will be asked to let the Senate know what it thinks and desires. He is especially anxious to secure prompt ratification of the British and French treaties, not only because they are desirable in themselves, but even more so because of the effect such ratification would have upon the negotiations which are now under way with other powers for similar conventions.

It is not that the ratification of the British and French treaties now would do so much to help along these other negotiations as it is that the failure to ratify them would be almost certain to check, if not to put an end to, the hope of obtaining other treaties.

There is not the slightest question as to the popularity of the pending treaties in the country. The White House has had ample evidence of it. This evidence has come not only through the comments of newspapers from one end of the country to the other, but also in letters and telegrams from peace organizations and from individuals who have manifested their interest in the success of the negotiations.

The president has found that the men and women in the humbler walks have taken the keenest interest in the arbitration treaties. These people, as they have written to him, have not seemed to consider it possible that there could be any opposition to the ratification of the treaties.

They have assumed all along that once the agreement was reached with the British and French plenipotentiaries the treaties would be an accomplished fact. The idea of the people is clearly shown by the fact that they are commonly referred to as the "peace treaties."

The President said to some of his callers recently that it had been borne in upon him that the people of this country really want peace and are against war.

If the arbitration treaties with Great Britain and France are now ratified there is some hope that a similar treaty may be obtained with Russia. In that event an entirely different situation would be created, which might facilitate the settlement of the Jewish question. On all accounts the President is strongly hopeful of obtaining ratification before the close of this session, and he will do everything in his power to accomplish that.

POLICE HEAD ASKS FOR 50 MORE MEN

PROVIDENCE, R. I.—An increase of 50 patrolmen is sought by Commissioner Luther, head of the police department of this city, who has just returned from a tour of Europe, where he looked into the police systems of the great foreign capitals. The cost of the increased force will be $513,682.50 a year, or $41,082 greater than at present. A junk shop inspector is also in the new proposition.

"The new officers asked for would bring the patrolling service up to 315 men. Even this would be only one patrolman to every 712 inhabitants, which is far below what is considered necessary in other cities with similar conditions," says Commissioner Luther.

DR. ROSS FINISHES HIS COURSE

Studies in "Pure Design and Representation" Aim to Inculcate Appreciation of Beauty

AT the Harvard summer school the course in pure design and representation under Dr. Denman Waldo Ross was completed today with final examination. The course has been given in Robinson hall and consisted of two classes, one in pure design, assisted by Edgar Oscar Parker, the other in representation, assisted by Martin Mower. Dr. Ross gave four lectures a week besides taking the class to the Museum of Fine Arts. One room in Robinson hall has cases filled with beautiful objects from Dr. Ross' collection and still life groups from these were arranged for the students to paint or for the designers.

The class has been considered unusually brilliant this year and some of the pictures painted by the students as problems in representation are held worthy of special exhibition.

The class has used a sequence of five colors in three values—blue, yellow, purple, green and scarlet—arranged and mixed according to Dr. Ross' theory. The result has given beautiful examples of color harmony in groups of still life or scenes showing children on the beach, while a study from life by Dr. Ross himself shows of what the sequence is capable in producing clear, vibrant flesh tones.

Dr. Ross' purpose is "to elucidate as far as possible the ideas which underlie the practise of drawing and painting as a fine art."

The class in pure design endeavors to produce "order that is harmony, balance and rhythm, in lines and spots of paint, in tones, measures and shapes. It aims at order and hopes to produce beauty."

The great value to the student is considered the gain he has made in appreciation of beauty, in his ability to discriminate and to know why one thing is better and more beautiful than another, and in his desire to bring about more order because there can be no beauty without order, and the simplest thing done in an orderly way has an element of beauty.

REVISE AND ENLARGE SOUTH BOSTON DOCK DEVELOPMENT PLANS

Important additions are planned by the American Building Trust for its South Boston development, it was announced by Harry Gilman, engineer of the corporation, today.

A drydock 950 feet long and 150 feet wide so arranged that it can be extended to a length of 1200 feet when necessary to take in the largest ships afloat and a second drydock 500 feet long and 125 feet wide are to be constructed. A large traveling crane and all the modern equipment of a drydock and shipyard outfit for repairing will be installed. All buildings and drydocks will be of concrete construction.

A large freight yard has been laid out at the head of the piers and at the eastern side of the factory-warehouse group of buildings.

Mr. Gilman sails on Saturday from New York on the Carmania for Liverpool where he will inspect the docking facilities and whence he will go to other important ports in England and on the continent. John H. Hodgdon, the principal promoter of the enterprise, will sail from New York on Aug. 23 to meet Mr. Gilman in Europe to confer with the bankers who are supporting the project.

CRUISER BRINGING BACK MR. STIMSON

HAVANA, Cuba—Henry L. Stimson, United States secretary of war, left aboard the armored cruiser North Carolina Tuesday for New York, where the warship is expected to arrive on Saturday.

Representatives of President Gomez, including Senor Zayas, General Monteagudo and Senors Sanguily and Machado of the cabinet, went on board to bid farewell.

SUMMER SCHOOL OF DESIGN CLOSES

PROVIDENCE, R. I.—The five weeks' course at the Rhode Island School of Design closed today and pupils representing 14 states and the Canadian provinces completed their summer studies. The session was the most successful one held by the institution. The summer school here was established five years ago, but the attendance this summer has been double that of any previous year.

AD MEN THANK MR. COLLINS

Acting Mayor Walter L. Collins has received a letter from H. B. Humphrey, chairman of the general committee in charge of the recent ad men's convention, in which the latter expressed his appreciation of the efforts which the acting mayor made to make the convention a success.

NEW HIGH SCHOOL FOR TOWN

EASTHAMPTON, Mass.—At a special town meeting Tuesday night it was voted to authorize the expenditure of $10,000 additional for a new high school building. This makes $48,000 in all, $38,000 having been appropriated at the annual town meeting last March.

BIGGER CARS FOR USE IN FAST TRAINS FOR CAMBRIDGE SUBWAY

The remaining section of the Boston end of the subway is being rushed to completion. The exits and entrances on Tremont street on both sides of Winter street consist of a stairway down and an escalator or moving stairway up.

There are two huge steel girders one above the other which have been placed in the eastern wall of the present subway to support the roof, which in this case is the center of Tremont street, while the cement work for the new station beneath the old is being carried on. Stairways from the street and from the old station will communicate with the new station giving ample entrance and exit facilities, the in and outbound passengers being separated.

Train A will run straight in on the inward bound track and while unloading and loading simultaneously train B, inward bound, will take the crossover and run in on the outbound track on the other side of the station; while train B is unloading and loading train A will run out, taking the crossover onto the outbound track beyond train B standing in the station.

Train C runs straight in again on the inward bound track, train B runs straight out on the outbound track and the combination is repeated.

JOHN W. GATES PASSES AWAY

PARIS—John W. Gates, the New York financier, passed away here early this morning.

John Warne Gates, steel manufacturer and banker, was born on a farm near Turner Junction, now West Chicago, and was educated in country schools.

He conducted a small hardware store at Turner Junction and then became a salesman in Texas for I. L. Ellwood, his specialty being the introduction of barbed wire. By his skill he built up a large business and then set up for himself in St. Louis.

In 1880 Mr. Gates organized the Southern Wire Company and later was prominent in the Braddock Wire Company, near Pittsburgh. He absorbed two other companies in 1892 in the Consolidated Steel & Wire Company and sold it in 1898. In 1897 he organized the American Steel & Wire Company, now part of the United States Steel Corporation.

At various times h was identified with numerous large transactions in railway and industrial stocks and was prominent in connection with the Clyde Steamship Company and the National Bank of North America.

ARLINGTON MEN GO ON OUTING

ARLINGTON, Mass. — The Arlington Business Men's Association is holding its third annual outing and picnic at Lexington park today, and all the stores here are closed for the day. Special cars with storekeepers, clerks and citizens left Arlington Heights at 9:30 a. m.

FASHIONS AND THE HOUSEHOLD

PEASANT STYLE SHIRT WAIST

Skirt trimmed with braid and buttons

THE shirt waist that is made in peasant style, or in one with the sleeves, is very popular. This one includes under-arm gores that provide smooth fit. It can be finished with a frill as illustrated or with a plain box plait as preferred.

The accompanying skirt is a plain six-gored one, but it is trimmed with braid and buttons to give a novel effect. As illustrated the skirt is made of mohair and the blouse is made of embroidered linen, but both are adapted to all seasonable materials.

The waist is an excelleent one for general wear made from washable materials, from silk, or from flannel, and the six-gored skirt is a favorite model both for indoor and street wear. This one being plain can be trimmed in any way that may be liked or can be finished with a stitched hem only, but braid and buttons are fashionable and the treatment shown is much to be desired.

The frill finishing the shirt waist is fashionable and generally very becoming. It can be made from embroidery or from material or from plain lawn hemstitched. In this instance the plait is covered with banding, but such treatment is by no means necessary. The blouse can be finished with a neckband and worn with any preferred collar, or with a round collar sewed to the neck edge.

For a woman of medium size the waist will require 2¾ yards 27 inches wide, 2¼ yards 36 or 44, with five eighths yard of banding and five eighths yard of plaiting to trim as illustrated. For the skirt will be required 5½ yards of material 27, 3½ yards 36, or 2¾ yards 44 inches with with 25 yards of narrow braid to trim as illustrated.

A pattern of the waist (7070), sizes 34 to 44 bust, or of the skirt (6982), sizes 22 to 32 waist, can be had at any May Manton agency or will be sent by mail. Address 132 East Twenty-third street, New York or Masonic Temple, Chicago.

TRIED RECIPES

PINEAPPLE IN LETTUCE NESTS

CUT a pineapple into small pieces. Add one cupful of finely chopped celery, one cupful of walnut meats, and one cupful of orange pulp. Shred one head of lettuce very finely and form into nests on individual plates. Mix one cupful of mayonnaise and stir it lightly with the pineapple, etc.; add more mayonnaise, if the fruit is not sufficiently moist, and heap into the little lettuce nests. Decorate with chopped walnuts.

SALADE DE LA VERSAILLES

Bail six artichokes, separate the "fronds" from the leaves, and cut into small pieces. Put in a salad bowl with an equal quantity of asparagus points that have been cooked in salted water. Take a handful of salted almonds, chop them fine, pound them with the juice of two lemons and a half a pint of cream, salt, and pepper, and pour over the salad. A little mayonnaise may be added to the salad, but it is more delicate in flavor without it.

With cold chicken nothing is more excellent than a salad of carrots, cucumbers and hard-boiled eggs, all cut in rings and sent to table with this dressing: Two tablespoonfuls of olive oil with one of lemon juice, with salt, pepper, and a speck of sugar to taste.

MUSHROOM SALAD

Remove the skin and almost all the stalk from some button mushrooms, drop them into boiling salted water, and cook for three minutes. Lay them on a napkin, and when quite cold sprinkle them with pepper and salt and pour over two tablespoonfuls of oil to one of Tarragon vinegar.

SHRIMP SALAD A LA BRETAGNE

Shell a quart of boiled shrimps and lay them on young lettuce leaves in a salad bowl. Chill some mayonnaise sauce on ice, pour over the shrimps and serve.

TONGUE SALAD

Mix together and put in a fine dredger a small quantity each of celery, salt, red pepper and black pepper, white sugar, and allspice. Take some thin slices of Russian tongue, squeeze a little lemon juice over the piece and lightly dredge with the above mixture. Shave up some white onions and celery and put them in the salad bowl with a few white lettuce hearts. Add the tongue next, then pour several spoonfuls of oil over the whole with a dash of vinegar. Serve at once.—New York Times.

ALL IN TIN

Invitations for an informal tin wedding anniversary party were issued on cards smoothly covered with tinfoil, the writing being done with a dull pencil. The hostess carried a bouquet encased in a tin funnel and the guests sent all sorts of tin presents, elaborately wrapped, says the Chicago Record-Herald. A tin dipper held white roses, a dustpan arrived tied with white satin ribbon; tin candlesticks, apple corer, toaster, canisters for tea and spices were all carefully sent in boxes by special messengers. Opening these parcels and reading congratulatory telegrams and special delivery letters furnished a good share of the evening's entertainment. All of these had been cleverly planned by the guests, and there were several good toasts arranged in rhymes. Refreshments were served on tin.

UNCOOKED FOODS

Make the simple foods your first choice, says the Woman's World. In selecting fruits always give preference to that which has ripened on the parent stock. Bananas, for instance, should never be cut from the stalk as long as a speck of green remains. You can often buy bananas at half price because they are black. If they are not decayed, they are much better food than yellow bananas.

Dates, figs and raisins are all good foods and can be used to good advantage as a summer food which requires no cooking. The unpressed figs are considered to be much cleaner than the pressed, and the seeded raisins are more desirable than the unseeded.

When buying apples, pick for the bright red ones which have ripened in the sunshine.

Other desirable foods which require no cooking are ripe olives, nuts, peanut butter, milk, honey, celery, cabbage, lettuce, cucumbers, radishes, onions, tomatoes, cress, chives, cheese, berries, pears and plums.

SIMPLE STYLES

The woman who does her own sewing should choose garments of simple construction, and should endeavor to put good work into the making, says the Montreal Star. In the fashioning of underwear, for instance, the hand-scalloped edges and the application of good, narrow, hand-made lace will raise the garment to a higher standard than if elaborately trimmed with wider lace of the machine-stitched variety.

PREFERRED PINS

Silk-covered hairpins are preferred by many to others, because they do not so easily slip out of place, says the Newark News. Then, too, as the silk-covered ones come in different shades of gray, auburn, golden and brown, they may be found to match the hair and so are inconspicuous.

"THE LAW OF A HOUSEHOLD"

VII. BUTLER, HOUSEMAID, CHEF

THE duties of the butler, as detailed in part last week, are so numerous it was necessary to hold over additional specifications for this week. These are assigned as "extra cleaning work on first floor." They are followed by instructions to the second man, the third man and housemaid, chef and chef's assistant.

EXTRA CLEANING WORK ON FIRST FLOOR

First week

Monday: Breakfast room and closets. Follow rule for general cleaning. Put clean paper in drawers. Rub table thoroughly with oil.

Tuesday: Side hall and vestibule and coat-room closet. All coats should be taken out of closets to air. The drawers put in order.

Wednesday: No extra work.

Thursday: Especial attention paid to outside door, vestibule, central hall, lavatory, reception and drawing room, music room and sun parlor in the morning.

Friday: Sitting room. Take everything out on side porch; open windows there, put bric-a-brac on a tray; carry to china closet.

Wash piano keys.

Greek vases must be handled carefully, dusted and put in safe place in library, until the mantel is dusted and cleaned. Use a slightly damped cloth to clean it.

Clean carved table with oiled cloth.

Friday: Clean kitchen; polish brass, clean nickel on stove, clean table drawers, wipe off top of stove.

Saturday: Prepare food for Sunday.

Send in vegetables and sauces before meals.

Do not put flour in gravy.

Put all left-over food nicely away.

See that kitchen is in perfect order at night.

CHEF'S ASSISTANT

Wages: $25 a month.

Terms of service: One week's notice or one week's pay given and required.

Obligations: To accept no tips or presents.

Perquisites: Coats and aprons washed and ironed.

Privileges: Every other Wednesday and Sunday afternoon and evening.

DUTIES

Rise at 5:30. To build fire, take up ashes, bring up coal. Assist chef in preparation of family and housekeeper's breakfasts. Wash cooking utensils, care of kitchen scullery, pantry, and refrigerator room, back hall, piazza, and flower closet. Wash floors.

Carry out orders of chef, wait on housekeeper's table, keep her table linen perfectly clean, and bring fresh flowers.

Remove all garbage daily. Keep garbage pails perfectly clean; scald with boiling water, and disinfect them every day. Empty garbage pails carefully.

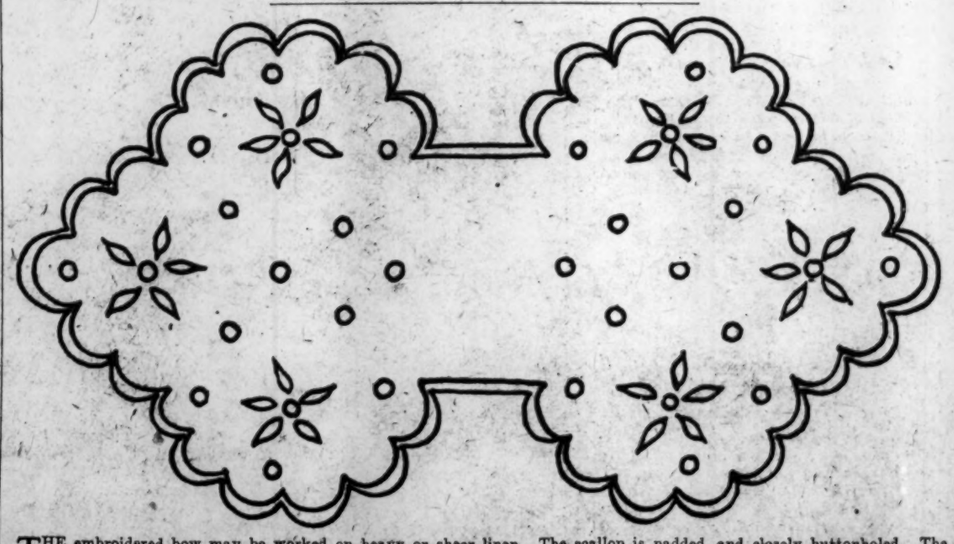
Sleeping quarters with fourth man in back basement bedroom. Keep all clothes hung up in bedroom closet. Keep bureau drawers in order.

FINGER MARKS

Finger marks on doors will quickly disappear if rubbed with a clean piece of flannel dipped in paraffin, says the San Diego Union. Afterwards wipe with a clean cloth, wrung out of hot water, in order to remove the smell of the oil.

EMBROIDERED BOW TO BE WORKED UPON LINEN

Scallops buttonholed and flowers done in solid satin stitch



THE embroidered bow may be worked on heavy or sheer linen. The scallop is padded, and closely buttonholed. The flowers are embroidered in the solid satin stitch and the dots as eyelets. The bow is drawn together in the center when finished. Colored or white mercerized cotton No. 20 is used.

New England Town Meeting Tradition Taught Immigrant

ENGLISH IS FIRST NEED OF PATRIOT

Many Hope to See Meaning Given to Occasion of Naturalization

EVENING at the North End. Hot weather. Children running and screaming in the streets. Women gossiping on the doorsteps, men on the curb. Fire escapes lined with men, women and children seeking relief from stuffy rooms.

On the roof of a building in Salem street, under a brightly illuminated awning, were gathered men and women in groups of 15 and 20, some mere youths who had several years to go before they were out of their teens, and others long past the half century mark. One and all they were busy perfecting themselves in English, zealously working to become honored citizens of that country of their dreams, America, whither they had come seeking home and fortune.

They were each one enrolled on the books of the Civic Service house at 112 Salem street, on the roof of which they were, and for the most part had recently come from far-off lands, Russia, Italy, Poland. Instead of attaining to immediate wealth, ease and plenty, they had found a strange land, a strange people, an unknown tongue, ways and manner of life unknown to them, a wilderness of strangeness and little opportunity to obtain even that kind of work which they knew how to do.

To them the Civil Service house has been a friend and protector, reaching out a helping hand to raise them from their hopelessness and start them on the way to the better things which they sought.

"We come to this country to better ourselves and find we are handicapped at the start by not knowing the language," says Antonio Terminiello, an Italian who calls himself one of the Civic Service house "boys." "All the ways are strange to us and things look pretty dark. We find a peculiar people. In Italy the people are happy and gay. Here they are serious. Never in his life has an Italian felt the need of knowing how to read and write as now. When he is with those who know how to speak English he will bite his finger, a way with Italians, and exclaim 'If I could only talk English.' He thinks of how much better a job he could get and how much more competent he would feel to do better things."

Antonio Terminiello came here from Italy himself, so he knows how they feel, though he was only a boy when he came with his mother to join his father, who had been here some time and had a pleasant little home ready for them. It had a parlor, such a room as he had never seen before, and a cook-stove, the like of which had never been in his part of the world. It was a dark, drizzling day, and he longed for his native Italy, with her familiar scenes, her green slopes and sparkling bay. He has been in this country long enough now to prefer it to his own, and is proud to be numbered among its citizens, but he has much sympathy for the newly arrived immigrant. No better work can be done for the immigrant, he says, than to teach him the English language, American ways, and how to live right. It is much better than to give them bread and butter, he says, for it helps him to get his own bread and butter; it puts heart into him and gives him self-respect. He is himself a graduate of some of the classes conducted at the house and a member of some of its clubs, and has been for so long it is a second home to him there.

Advantages Appreciated

Civic Service house is both a settlement and a school for citizenship. It inhabits one of the old, four-story brick houses that formerly lined the street. On its door is a silver plate which simply states the name of the house, and up the narrow, friendly flight of stairs are the offices, class rooms and reading rooms. These are open every night, and winter and summer are well filled by the members who frequently come from long distances to partake of its advantages.

The reading rooms are stocked with good books, magazines and newspapers, a long table, a writing desk, and plenty of chairs. Its walls are hung with pictures of American subjects and postcards grouped on a large mat. The classes are held in the different rooms, except on pleasant evenings in summer, when they are conducted on the roof.

The roof is flat and ample. It has been surrounded by a rail fence, outside of which flower boxes have been placed, outlining the entire room. These have been planted with seeds and are making a brave showing of nasturtiums and scarlet runners, some of which are sturdily climbing upward on long strings towards the awning which is stretched across one end.

A motley collection of chairs—student chairs with their big right arms cane chairs, willow chairs and benches, long tables and a blackboard furnish this open-air school room. It is lighted with gas, lantern-like reflectors placed at intervals. If there is a breath of air stirring it is to be felt on this roof. It is a pleasant place to study, in itself sufficiently attractive to lure to a long walk, but it is for a serious purpose these men and women come together. The beauty of the evening sky is but an incident accompanying the business in hand. The noise from the streets comes up to them and with the entertainments carried on on the fire-escapes and by the occupants of the neighboring windows often seriously interferes, but they adhere closely to their tasks.

The classes are held all the year round, but in the spring and summer months the attendance is larger than in winter. This is because the public evening schools are open in winter, but the terms are short and the long months between are too valuable to let idly pass by these new residents. Most of the immigrants come to this country in summer and can obtain a good start in English speaking and American ways before the evening schools begin. If it were not for these classes aliens arriving in May or June would be obliged to wait until October before they could learn the English they need and come in contact with that important assimilating agency, the public school. Therefore 150 can be safely counted on to be on hand practically every week-day night in the year. Some of the pupils are quite well educated in their own language, while others can neither read nor write in any.

Americanism Taught

It is important that the newly arrived should have some knowledge of the customs of the city to which he has come. He is therefore given instructions in certain legislative, fire, police and street-cleaning regulations and the privileges and duties of the citizen. English is the principal thing taught, but arithmetic, grammar, composition and kindred subjects are included in the curriculum, while through all runs the ideal of citizenship, its duties and responsibilities.

The effective teaching of what is commonly called civics has been a subject of deepest interest and much experiment in the Civic Service house. The problem of the newly arrived foreigner in the congested, un-American tenement district is conceded to be twofold; he must learn English in the shortest time possible in order to get suitable work, and he must know his rights and duties so as to be enlisted at once in the ranks of good citizenship. Counteraction is seen to be needed against the shock which the first raw impressions of the new world bring to the alien, who is often sensitive and idealistic beyond the conception of those who know him only as they see him in the steerage of the steamer, laboring in the streets or wandering about the streets peddling his wares.

There are six special classes in citizenship in the school, the teachers of which are constantly working out and revising the material necessary for the important work. As a beginning was issued the "Civic Reader for the New Americans," a book now in use in the immigrant classes of the Boston public evening schools.

In the enrolment of immigrants in the classes, the first papers necessary to their naturalization are always filled out for them. They are thus definitely started on careers of citizenship. The Civic Service house regards the five years preceding naturalization as a weighty period of preparation. Before the men are ready for their second papers a varied program of instruction and lectures is carried out. Men of all ages sit together in these classes after a day's toil in shops or peddling on the streets.

These workers believe that the day will come in this country when the naturalization ceremony will be made solemn, impressive and beautiful, while today it is left almost meaningless and is often placed in the hands of those who cheapen if they do not pervert its significance.

Clubs Numerous

When the house was opened in the summer of 1901, it set out definitely to specialize along civic lines. Several weeks before it was opened a meeting of a number of representative residents, young men and women of the neighborhood, was called, and the entire plan was submitted to them. They voted their approval and chose the name, Civic Service house, from a number that were considered. The work, therefore, started with the approval and understanding of its more thoughtful neighbors.

From the outset the policy has been to develop a group of active civic clubs and to have the club programs and club exercises emphasize the civic interests, rights and duties of the members. In order to carry out the policy it has been necessary to refuse admittance or housing to excellent clubs of the neighborhood that were organized for social, athletic and other aims of intrinsic value yet hardly in keeping with the purpose of the house. There has always been cooperation with them but their admission into the house would have shut out of its limited quarters the clubs now there for definite civic ends.

A large part of the work at the house is accomplished through the initiative, the self-government and social enthusiasm of its clubs. Monthly, fortnightly and in some instances weekly meetings invariably include lectures by invited speakers or by members themselves, followed frequently by a program of music and educational exercises every detail of which the members themselves provide. The topics cover civic, economic and educational subjects and include public speaking under the direction of professional teachers.

The names of these clubs indicate the idea that animates them. Among them are the Forward Club, Emerson Literary, Progressive and Self-Educational, Civic Education, Webster, Jewish Educational, Betsy Ross, Dante Literary, Disraeli, New American, Russian, Greater Boston, Speakers, Eliot and Hancock. The Hancock, which is a girls' club, is comparatively new. Mrs. Meyer Bloomfield has charge of it. The Eliot is older, very enterprising and ambitious, filled with civic zeal. For two years it has been exerting every effort to have an evening high school in the North End, for the members are working not merely for the benefit of themselves but for that of the entire district.

Schools Assisted

All of the people who attend the classes or the clubs conducted by the house either go to the day school or are wage earners. An immigrant child entering the schools in Boston, though he may be well educated in his own tongue, is naturally at a disadvantage in the new country and has to be put back in his grades. This makes it hard for him in several ways. While spending as much time in school as an American child, he is kept constantly at the rudiments and therefore does not receive the advanced instruction that he ought. The work that is done by the house to overcome this condition is best told by a note sent by a teacher at the Eliot school to the director of the house, Phillip Davis. It was brought to him by several boys and asked him to do for them what had been done for three or four other boys last year. "They left my class in the fourth grade in June," the note ran, "and in October entered the high school."

Some of those in the present classes expect to go to college next fall. One is preparing for Harvard, one for Boston University law school, and several for Tufts.

One of the most faithful at the classes is a woman who came to this country from Russia a number of years ago. All day she toils in a sweat shop, but she is eager to learn. Night after night, no matter what the weather, she walks a long distance to come to the school. She advances but slowly, as she talks Yiddish all day, having but little chance to speak English outside of the Civic house. She has been in all the elementary classes, finishing one but to enter another.

Labor Questions Settled

The attitude of the Civic Service house toward the neighborhood and community has never been academic. There has been no belief that education alone would solve the problems that confront the people of a district like the North End. The work has been held as strictly civic, needing both an educational approach and a practical, immediate contact. The house has taken a keen interest in the labor problems. During the different strikes the building has been given over to conferences. The employers as well as the employees met within it in executive session, the former on the first floor, the latter on the third. On several occasions the house had the experience of bringing the two sides together on the middle floor, pledged to a middle course.

Perhaps the most important indirect result of these local stirrings among the working women in industry is the fact that the Women's Trade Union League of America had its inception in this house. A resident of the house at the time of the convention of the American Federation of Labor in Faneuil hall in 1904 called together a group of labor leaders and steps were taken then and there to perfect the first executive committee of such a union.

Prof. Frank Parsons, who began the work, learned here the need of vocational guidance. He started in this house the original vocational bureau and later two others, one at the Young Men's Union and the other at the Women's Educational and Industrial Union.

Recreation Provided

Work is not the only thought to which the Civic Service house gives attention Concerts attracting several hundred people are given on the roof. During the summer numerous outings are given. The last Sunday in June a large party of members went in a special car to Middlesex Fells. The Sunday before 82 of them spent the day in the Blue hills, and every Sunday since they have gone somewhere.

The house maintains a camp at West Gloucester, Camp Agassiz, it is called, after the famous naturalist who was the father of Mrs. Quincy Shaw, who is deeply interested in the work of the house. The camp offers to each member a two weeks' vacation at nominal cost. Accommodations are sufficient for 15 persons at a time. Three camp houses have been put up. One has a large dining-room, kitchen and chambers. The other two have sleeping apartments only. Tents also are provided for those who wish them. The Rev. William W. Locke is permanent resident at the camp, which will be open until late in September. Mrs. Meyer Bloomfield takes a special interest in the camp life and is active in organizing many things which add to the attractions and value of the two weeks out of doors. They have singing and folk dancing. Last year they gave a Japanese opera. Most of the members know well how to sing, as a large singing class is conducted by Miss Rebecca Hyman.

Meyer Bloomfield is supervisor of the house and Phillip Davis director. Samuel Spring is in charge of the educational work. The staff of instructors is composed of Miss Bessie Edelstein, Miss Margaret O'Connell, Miss Mary V. Megher, Miss Gertrude Gale, Miss Rebecca Hyman, Miss Maud Smith, Stanley Davis, John Diggins and A. C. Bang. The Rev. Mr. Locke is camp manager.

The larger object of the Civic Service house to which the work with the individual tends is to train workers and leaders for the neighborhood. It maintains that in the varied gifts of a neighborhood such as the North End are always to be found talent for leadership and social genius, and that the highest opportunity that can come to any social work is to discover and bring out in the average individual his or her talent for civic betterment. Local improvement committees, agitations to remedy certain conditions, investigation of conditions, police action and countless other phases of local municipal life have all figured largely in the program of work. The members themselves have become workers, teachers and leaders in the various activities of the house. The majority of these teacher-members have for years been appointed because of their experience in the citizenship classes as teachers and interpreters in the public evening schools. Members who have moved to other localities have started civic and educational clubs among their associates and fellow workingmen. The first woman sanitary inspector in Boston received her training largely at this house. She was born and brought up in the North End. Others can be found occupying municipal positions and actively engaged in efforts to promote civic betterment along various lines.

WHAT EDITORS ARE SAYING

THE selected editorial comments today deal with the visit of Admiral Togo of Japan to the United States.

WASHINGTON HERALD — Admiral Heihachiro Togo is a great man. He is one of those fated to make history, and he has done so. His visit to our shores will be regarded not only as another token of the friendship which exists between the Mikado and his government and people and the United States, but will be especially gratifying to those among us who appreciate naval achievements. As a captain of unusual capacity, Togo was known to us long before the war of his country with Russia, for it was he who began the Japanese war with China, just as it was he who virtually ended the conflict with Russia, giving his native country the long coveted supremacy over all other nations in far eastern waters.

BUFFALO COMMERCIAL—The country by its authorized representatives, gives a hearty welcome to Admiral Togo, the Nelson of Japan, and the greatest naval commander the East ever produced. He landed at New York as the nation's guest, and his prompt approval of the arbitration treaties was gratifying and significant. He expressed the opinion that such a treaty would also be a good thing for Japan. Undoubtedly it would.

RICHMOND VIRGINIAN — Admiral Togo is perhaps the most conspicuous figure in the naval service of the world. His long life has been spent in the profession and practise of a naval officer, and by his comprehensive mastery of the details of his profession, by his conspicuous ability and by his unrivaled courage and daring, he has risen step by step to the highest position in the service of his own nation, and to a place in the navies of today challenged by none.

CHICAGO RECORD-HERALD—In honoring Admiral Togo, one of the makers of modern Japan and the greatest hero of the Russo-Japanese war, the people and government of the United States honor what is noblest in genius. They honor self-subordination, the spirit of service, courage and fidelity, humility and virtue. The silent, austere, masterful admiral typifies modern Japan. . . . Admiral Togo pays no hypocritical tributes or empty compliments. He is the guest of the nation, and he is sincere in his words of appreciation and wonder. Americans, in turn, are sincere in warmly welcoming him and doing him deserved honor in his individual as well as representative capacity.

NEW YORK POST—As for the great admiral, he may rest assured both of the sincerity of his welcome and of the friendliness to his people of the great bulk of the American nation. Demagogues he will find . . . But the masses here as in Japan cordially wish each other well. The conscience and character of this country heartily reecho the message of peace Admiral Togo brings. It is not without significance that his visit is coincident with the signing of two arbitration treaties that mark the greatest step forward toward perpetual peace. His visit can only help to speed the day when his countrymen enter into a similar arrangement with the United States.

NEW YORK MAIL—Admiral Togo, who in a single hour of fighting in Tsushima straits . . . forced the remaking of the map of Asia, and raised his own country to the level of a first-class power, has reached our shores for a brief sojourn as a guest of the nation. He is heartily welcome. He deserves and will receive in fullest measure all the honors due to a man who embodies in his own character the qualities of the great and magnanimous warrior, the accomplished statesmen and the modest gentleman.

NEW YORK WORLD—Japan in the passing guest of this nation presents to the world the perfect figure of the sea fighter. The United States, by Mr. Taft's leadership in the cause of arbitration, presents the permanent idea of justice and peace among the nations of the world. In the meeting of the two men and in the contrast of the two ideas they today personify, the past and the future are brought face to face. Who will say that the signing of the treaties at Washington in their after-results will not be more enduring and of more benefit not to one people but to all the peoples of the world than the victory won at Tsushima by Togo's guns?

NEW HAVEN REGISTER—America is sincere in its tribute to Admiral Togo. He is one of the greatest naval commanders of the day. He is one of the men who, doing much, can afford to say little. He is one of Japan's greatest heroes. To receive him with the honor which is his due will still further strengthen the ties between Japan and this nation and make still more ridiculous the bogey of Japanese designs against America.

HUNDREDS GUESTS OF HELEN GOULD

NEW YORK — Miss Helen M. Gould entertained 500 Volunteers of America at her farm and playground, near Glenville, N. Y., Tuesday. The party was in charge of Col. Joseph Keppel and Captain Booth, and it was made up of mothers and children. They came from New York by the boat Apollo, which arrived at Tarrytown at noon. Special trolley cars were in waiting to convey them to the field.

SENATOR LODGE WINS ON NAHANT TOWN HALL VOTE

NAHANT, Mass.—Senator Lodge won his contest for revision of the plans for a new town hall for this municipality at a special town meeting held here Tuesday.

The senator made a speech of considerable length, in which he criticized the plans previously accepted, and 156 of the 232 voters who participated in the meeting decided to revoke their former decision, discharge the committee which was appointed to supervise the erection of the building, and turn the entire matter over to a new committee to be chosen by Senator Lodge with instructions to report a plan for a reasonably fireproof building, which shall not cost more than $75,000. The amount was reappropriated for the structure.

The action of the town meeting was a great disappointment to Daniel G. Finnerty, who has persistently fought for the acceptance by the town of a hall for which he had been sponsor, his plans having been accepted at the last annual town meeting by a close vote.

BUXTON FAMLIY ANNUAL REUNION

EAST DOUGLAS, Mass.—The sixth annual reunion of the Buxton family, descendants of James and Esther Southwick Buxton, was held yesterday at the Douglas camp ground, more than 50 being present.

The youngest member present was little Salome Buxton Flemming of Uxbridge, who was the recipient of an antique china pitcher, 102 years old, from Mrs. Minnie Park. A feature of the dinner was a large fruit cake brought by Mrs. Joseph Carpenter of East Greenwich and presented to Charles Buxton, president, Monroe Ide, secretary, and William Wallace Buxton,

ADVERTISING AND BUSINESS-BUILDING ON LIMITED CAPITAL ARE DISCUSSED

By S. C. SPALDING

IN the preceding article, we dwelt, in a general way, on the all-importance of a knowledge of the laws of modern business-building—including advertising—to the business man or woman of comparatively limited capital, whether manufacturer, retailer, etc., and whether doing a national or local business. In this second article we shall get down to particulars and consider some of the special problems of the small-space advertiser in national publications.

To advertise means, the dictionaries tell us, "to make known," "to inform." First, then, is it possible for a concern, with limited capital, successfully to "make known" something by means of small-space advertisements in national publications? There can be only one answer—certainly, it is possible; it has been done again and again, and will be done again and again. Resultful small-space advertising in publications of national circulation, however, has its rather well-defined laws and limitations. It is to point out some of these that this article and the following one were undertaken.

In the first place, what is called "general publicity" cannot be successfully indulged in through small-space advertising. "General publicity," it should be explained, is a term used to designate the kind of advertising employed for many of the best known products, such as Ralston's Food, Educator crackers, etc.—advertising which is usually characterized by a striking picture, to catch the eye, an illustration of the article, and just a few crisp words of text, a few pleasing generalities.

Wrong Method Tried

Obviously this sort of thing requires large space and unlimited means. Yet many small-space advertisers (by which we mean those using from half an inch to, say, three inches, single column, standard magazine size) attempt to do something like this in their own way and thereby come to grief. Captivated by the dash and cleverness of the big "general publicity" advertisement, they try to get the same effect in the space they can afford. All they do get is experience—of a "disagreeable" kind. Their advertisements say next to nothing about something of which the reader knows nothing, and beget no desire in him to know more.

These misguided advertisers indulge in cut-and-dried generalities, unattractively presented; in broad statements which are doubtless equally true of many other similar commodities; or in preposterous claims which no intelligent reader takes seriously. They assume an eager, ready-made interest on the reader's part, which is non-existent. They offer no definite or attractive inducements and invite no specific action. Or, if they do, they are likely to do so either too languidly or too peremptorily.

A particularly flagrant example of one kind of attempted "general publicity" is now appearing from time to time in at least one of the largest national mediums. It consists simply of the empty words: "White Lead? ——— Bros. It's easy to remember! ——— Bros." The ad measures one inch, single column.

Again, many small-space advertisers urge the reader to ask for their goods at local stores, either with or without an offer to supply directly in case the dealer does not carry them. This, too, is generally inadvisable. An advertiser either has a widespread dealer-distribution throughout the country, or he has not. If he has, he can afford to use larger space, and should do so. If he has not, he should not expect to obtain such distribution through small-space advertising. Even large-space campaigns have failed again and again to secure anything like general dealer-distribution, when relied on alone, without intelligent and persistent efforts directed toward the dealers themselves.

As for small-space advertising of this sort, it almost always indicates a lack of distribution through dealers. Even if it appears regularly, month after month, in several publications, is unusually effective and succeeds in inducing a comparatively large number of readers to inquire for the product at one or more of their local dealers, these inquiries will be so widely scattered among the hundreds and thousands of dealers, all over the country, that it will hardly bring more than one or two to any one store—not nearly enough to assure dealers of a demand or encourage them to put the article in stock.

Interest Not Enough

In most cases the reader will not be sufficiently impressed by small-space advertising for his interest to survive one or two rebuffs in trying to secure a product locally. He will become discouraged and drop the matter altogether. Or else, in the shopping around thus involved, he will be persuaded to buy something else. This is, of course, a danger in all such ads, large or small, but it is peculiarly so in the latter case, because it is almost impossible to bring out the special merits of an article strikingly enough in small space to beget a desire for that and nothing else—that is, a desire strong enough to resist the appeal of the ever-present "just as good."

If this is true in the case of the most regular and persistent small-space advertiser, employing the most effective advertisements of their kind, in the best mediums, it is far more noticeable with the average advertiser of this class, who buys space only occasionally, selects mediums at haphazard, runs poor "copy," and is easily discouraged.

Now, what is the way out, for the advertiser who can only afford small space, and yet wishes to secure distribution through dealers, instead of selling direct to the consumer?

In the writer's judgment, it lies chiefly in giving up the idea of national advertising altogether, until the size of the advertising appropriation and the extent of dealer-distribution justify it. Hundreds of thousands of dollars are wasted in this country every year, on large space and small, in misguided and premature attempts to advertise nationally. This is no fault of advertising itself, or of the mediums. The advertisers are simply not ready to profit by national publicity and should not have rushed headlong into it.

To illustrate what is meant: The most phenomenally successful advertising campaign-in-little which ever came to the writer's notice was, from the advertiser's standpoint, a comparative failure. A furnace manufacturer used two quarter-pages and a half-page, in three successive issues of one of the most popular magazines. The cost in all was about $450, and brought, directly and indirectly, over $18,000 worth of business. The result was amazing, but the manufacturer did not have agents enough to handle the orders profitably. He had to send men so far to install the furnaces, in many cases, that the extra expenses ate up all the profits.

This manufacturer should, obviously, have concentrated his advertising, at that stage, in the newspapers of the cities, or only a few of the cities, where he had energetic and competent agents. The latter would probably have willingly borne part of the expenses, and, by this co-operation with them, the manufacturer would have done the best possible for himself and earned the agents' lasting good-will. Later, when he had secured agents strategically scattered over the states where the bulk of the general magazines goes, would have been the time to advertise nationally.

This is the chief remedy—concentrated advertising instead of diffused. If the appropriation is small, let the advertiser begin with one city and thoroughly conduct a campaign in miniature there. Then he can gradually extend his sphere of action, taking in another city, a county, state, etc. This is the sane, practical and economical way. By using newspapers and printing the names of all local dealers handling his goods, he concentrates the demand created by his advertisements and does not lose most of the possible sales by sending readers on wild-goose chases for the article.

National advertising—in weekly or monthly magazines or in the only generally circulated newspaper, the Monitor—is a truly wonderful business-building force. But it must be used with intelligence.

As a matter of fact, if, for any reason, this concentrated advertising plan does not appeal to a concern, national advertising in small space may be employed with considerable success, provided one vitally important rule is observed. The best advice one can give in such a case is this:

If you do not have general distribution through dealers, do not pretend to have. Do not say "At all dealers" when only a comparatively few stores here and there handle your goods. First, it is not an honest statement. Second, it has misled and disgusted millions of readers and lost millions of sales until readers of national publications have come to despair of finding most of the articles thus mendaciously and unwisely referred to.

The excuse for this suicidal practise is that it brings inquirers to local dealers, all over the country, thus (in theory) influencing them to put the article in stock. But these inquiries are far too widely scattered to be effective for this purpose. On the other hand, it is unquestionable that it turns multitudes of interested readers, would-be purchasers, into indifferent, disappointed or disgruntled critics—thus worse than undoing all the good which the advertising has accomplished.

Instead of this, it is urged that advertisers should offer an attractive booklet, etc., under some especially appealing name, or a sample, in order to encourage inquiries by mail. Each of these inquirers should be answered personally, in some way. If the writer lives in or near a community in which the advertiser has an agent, the agent's name and address should be given in the answer, and the inquirer's name and address referred at once to the agent. If there is no dealer near the inquirer, the advertiser himself should be prepared to offer to supply the article promptly by mail, express, etc. The names thus secured can later be effectively used in securing dealers. Gradually, as the number of agents increases, the mail orders will decrease in number, and some day the advertiser may be able to say truthfully, "At almost all dealers."

CHICAGO REQUEST FOR TAX RETURNS

WASHINGTON—The Chicago board of review, which hears appeals from tax assessments in that city, has asked the government to furnish to it the corporation tax returns of every corporation in Cook county, Illinois, that the board may check the returns the corporations have made to the city and the state.

Secretary MacVeagh is considering the request and probably will decline to give the information.

RALLIES TO OPEN CONTEST IN SIXTH

WAKEFIELD, Mass.—The Democratic campaign in the sixth Middlesex senatorial district, which comprises this town, Woburn, Winchester, Stoneham and Arlington, will open tonight with rallies in Grand Army hall at Stoneham and in the Social Club hall in this town. The candidate, Joseph J. Donahue of Medford, with John F. McDonald, chairman of the Democratic state central committee and others, will speak at both rallies.

AT RAILROAD TERMINALS

The Boston & Albany road is building a new yard and tower at Ashland, Mass., to take care of the proposed circuit trains via Franklin, Hopedale and Hopkinton, which the New Haven road contemplates placing in service.

Joseph Dooley, first assistant general yard master for the Boston Terminal Company at the South station is spending a two weeks' vacation at Nantucket.

TWO STEAMERS SINK

GIBRALTAR—The French mail steamer Emir sank today after colliding with the British steamer Silvertown in a heavy fog in the Straits of Gibraltar. It is feared that 27 persons perished. The Emir went down within five minutes after the collision. The Silvertown rescued 86 passengers and members of the crew. They were brought to Gibraltar.

ROTTERDAM — Six persons are reported to have perished and 10 others were injured today when the boilers of the German passenger steamer Gutenberg exploded. The force of the explosion broke the vessel in two and it sank almost immediately.

REAL ESTATE

EVERETT AND WINTHROP SALES

Through the office of Floyd & Tucker an eight-room dwelling on Greenhalge street, Everett, has been conveyed by A. F. Robbins to Mrs. Sarah E. Harvey of Malden.

A lot of land in Winthrop, containing 4590 square feet, situated on Villa avenue, has been sold by O. F. Belcher to S. H. Griffin of Winthrop.

NEW APARTMENT HOTEL

A site is being cleared at Washington street and Adams place, Roxbury, for an apartment hotel to be erected for the Associated Trust, at a cost of about $40,000. The lot of land contains 4900 square feet and has a 50-foot frontage. The proposed structure will have a depth of 100 feet. Plans are by R. J. Culbert, under whose supervision the building will be erected.

HOTEL TO COST $10,000,000

Rumors of a $10,000,000 hotel project for Longacre square, New York, are current.

It is said that a deal which will mean the erection of a 22-story hostelry on the plot occupied by the New York and Criterion theaters will be made public within a few days. The site, valued around $4,500,000, has a frontage of 203 feet on the east side of Broadway, 102 feet on Forty-fourth street and 154 feet on Forty-fifth street. The present owner of the property is the New York Theater Company, controlled by Klaw & Erlanger and associates.

Rumor further declares that the new hotel is to be leased for 99 years at an annual rental of over $850,000.

ESSEX STREET ESTATE SOLD

The valuable parcel of city proper realty, numbered 94 Essex street, near Kingston street, South End, has just been sold by Charles R. Batt, trustee, to Edward Firmin. There is a five-story building and 1813 square feet of land, all taxed for $57,000, of which amount $40,000 is on the lot.

SOUTH END—DORCHESTER

Morris Nemerofsky has just sold to Annie Howard the property at 4 Decatur street, near Harrison avenue, South End. It is taxed as a whole for $9200, of which amount $2600 is on the 1289 square feet of land in the lot. There is a four-story brick house.

In the Dorchester district Lot Phillips has conveyed to Thomas H. Bultimer the frame house and 4520 square feet of land at 190 Savin Hill avenue, near Grampian way. The total assessment is $5600, with $1400 on the lot.

WITH OUR ADVERTISERS

The progress of the last 10 years marks no more important change, perhaps, than that which has taken place in the conduct of philanthropic work. It is no longer sporadic and temporary. It endeavors to dig deep and strike at causes, to build systematically and surely; it aims at the ultimate as well as seeks to improve the immediate. In this way is being worked out a method of social and civic work on the basis of accumulated experience and careful inquiry, precisely as has been done in the past in legal and other professions. In the last two decades many prominent social movements have developed under private voluntary auspices; public philanthropic institutions have been modernized and cities are being remade under broad plans for promoting the welfare of the residents. Educated men and women are impressed with their opportunities and obligations to serve the community in some definite way. The specialization of this work demands specific knowledge of some branch of it as well as a larger social intelligence. To meet this demand for skilled professional service in humanitarian work the Chicago School of Civics and Philanthropy was instituted in 1903. Like other professional schools it offers special facilities and equipment in its field.

Prof. Graham Taylor, the president, is now in Europe making a study of social conditions there preparatory for his opening course of lectures on the survey of the field and its requirements for social work. The field of civics, which is developing unusual interest, is to be covered in a course of lectures by Charles E. Merriam, who was the progressive candidate for mayor at the last municipal election in Chicago, and George C. Sikes, secretary of the bureau of municipal efficiency. Lectures, recitations and examinations on theory and practise are divided with actual field work on the art of the student.

Among its trustees the school numbers Jane Addams of Hull house and others prominent in philanthropic, social and educational work. It is located at 37 Lake street, Chicago.

Wearers of the Crossett shoe have been taking advantage of the mark-down sale which has been going on for several days at the Crossett shoe store at 166 Tremont street. Men's shoes have been reduced from $4, $4.50 and $5 to $2.95 and $3.45, and women's to the uniform price of $2.45. These include boots, oxfords and pumps. Among them are many of the bench-made shoes ordinarily selling at $5.

In summer almost more than at any other time, it seems, people drop in unexpectedly in the late afternoon or evening and the hospitable host likes to have on hand some dainty refreshment to offer. This is particularly true in suburban places where the visitors have come in a motor car, or have taken a long ride on the trolley car. Porch parties also are delightful and frequent, arranged on the spur of the moment. The wise housewife therefore tries always to be provided with something that can be served in a hurry. Excellent for this purpose is the fruit cake made by Rich, Rich's fruit cake, it is called, and rich it is, quite unlike that which is usually bought. It is practically home made, put together from an old recipe that has been handed down and is made from the genuine materials. No cotton-seed oil or other substitutes go into it. It is made by F. L. Rich of Roxbury, Mass. As it keeps indefinitely there is no danger of its getting stale if not eaten. Consequently there is no waste and it is always ready. It is also a very good thing to have on hand for the picnic lunch and unexpected excursions which constitute so large a part of the summer's pleasures.

Two courses of study, a college preparatory and a general, are offered to students by the Mount Ida school for girls. The former fits a student to enter any American college for women. It is so arranged that such a selection of studies may be made as will prepare a student for a particular college or any special college course. The teachers are all college graduates of large experience. Pupils have gone from the school direct to Radcliffe, Bryn Mawr, Baltimore College for Women, Wellesley, Smith, Vassar, Cornell, Mount Holyoke, University of Chicago, University of Michigan, College for Women at Cleveland and many others.

The general course is arranged for those who do not intend going to college. With the exception of English, which is required of all students, the studies in this course are almost entirely elective. The school makes a specialty of its instruction in music. The teachers in piano, pipe organ, voice and violin are among the best in Boston. Wholly practical domestic instruction includes both sewing and cooking with the general care of the home, marketing, household values and the general management of household affairs.

From time to time during the year lectures are given on subjects connected with the regular school work. The eastern part of Massachusetts being rich in literary and historical associations the pleasant days of autumn and spring are devoted to pilgrimages to different places of special interest.

The school is equipped with a gymnasium and plenty of opportunity is afforded for the usual out-of-door sports, tennis, golf, basketball, riding, driving and canoeing on the Charles river, but a few minutes walk from the school.

Extensive additions and improvements in the school buildings have been made in the last few months, among them a large new building. This contains schoolrooms, laboratories, kitchens, etc., for the domestic course, chapel with new pipe organ, new gymnasium, and swimming pool.

A feature of the school is the emphasis put upon the home life. It has the atmosphere of home rather than a large boarding school, although it registers from 75 to 100 pupils, plenty to enable them to form abundant companionships, and from young women coming to it from all over the United States and Canada. The school is located in Newton, Mass., one of the most beautiful suburbs of Boston. Its principal is George Franklin Jewett, A.B., A.M., Harvard.

The demand for portraits enlarged from photographs seems to be on the increase. The Boston Portrait Company (Inc.) of 34 and 36 Portland street does portraiture work of this and all kinds satisfactorily and frames them to harmonize. Most of them are done in sepia, the soft brown shades being pleasing to the eye, but crayons reproducing the colorings of the original are preferred by some. Enlargements are made from daguerreotypes.

The responsibility for the pleasure afforded by the camera on a holiday trip rests largely with the one who does the developing. Imperfection of work undoes labor and spoils many a memento of happy hours that would have been carefully treasured through many more. It is well to send particular work of this nature to some one who can be relied upon to do it carefully. Much of this kind of developing and printing is done at Thurston's, 50 Bromfield street. Photographic supplies are also carried there.

WILL OF BISHOP MALLALIEU FILED

The will of Bishop Mallalieu of Auburndale was filed for probate yesterday at East Cambridge. It is dated April 10, 1906, and names Willard E., a son, and the Old Colony Trust Company as executors.

WOBURN BUSINESS MEN AT SEASHORE

The Woburn Merchants Association, about 300 in number, is holding its annual outing at Nantasket today. The program includes a parade, ball game, athletic events and other amusements. After the ball game the party will adjourn to Paragon park for dinner. Samuel Highley, president of the association, is chief marshal.

MEXICO AT PEACE WITH WORLD, SAYS FOREIGN MINISTER

MEXICO CITY—That Mexico is at peace with the world and that no nation is pressing its claims is the assertion of Senor Carbajan, the acting minister of foreign relations. The forthcoming visit of a Chinese cruiser, said Senor Carbajan Tuesday, will be a most friendly one. Her flag will be honored and her officers and men well received.

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. — "Conditions here are beyond control and I would ask that you return and take charge of the situation," reads a cipher cable dispatch said to have been sent by President de la Barra of Mexico to Jose Yves Limantour now in Paris. Doubt is expressed as to the authenticity of the message.

OFFERS $6000 FOR THE CITY'S ISLAND

The first offer to buy Greater Brewster island in Boston harbor since the announcement that it was for sale has been received by the street commissioner from George Hatchard of Hull, who is willing to pay the city $6000 for the island, which contains 23 acres of land and for which the city paid $4000 in 1848.

The island is in the township of Hull and the price offered is considerably above the assessed valuation and will be submitted to the mayor on his return from Europe.

BUILDING BOOM IN READING GROWS

READING, Mass.—The building boom which has been on in this town since early spring is increasing. About 20 new residences costing from $2000 to $10,000 are going up.

An important feature in local building in the near future will be the opening of Sunnyside and Scotland parks. For the owners of Sunnyside park Pratt street and Fairview avenue have been extended and the new streets will open 55 new building lots. All lots in Scotland park have been sold and many new houses are to be built there.

Consols of England, Though Quoted Low, Hold First Place

MODERN TRUSTEE HAS BROAD SCOPE

Taxation Increase and Debt Redemption Causes of Changed Figures

LONDON—There had been no exciting cricket news that day, and no sensational tragedy to catch the taste of a sensation-loving public, and one of the evening papers could find nothing more attractive to put upon its posters than "Further fall in consols." Said one road-mender to another as, stopping for a moment to rest from his work, his eye caught the large type: "Say, Bill, what's the matter with these blooming consols?"

That is a question which for some years has exercised the minds of the British public.

In the first place, to parody the lady who heard some people talking about the poet Keats, "What are consols?"

"Consols" is an abbreviated way of saying "the consolidated debt of the United Kingdom," and for generations past its quoted price has been looked upon as a barometer indicating not only the present state of English prosperity and peace, but also the prospect of the immediate future.

In 1897 consols reached the price of 113⅞ per cent; at present (July, 1911) they are under 79. If this depreciation of 34 per cent really represents a proportionate decline in British credit, the prospect is certainly alarming and an inquiry into the question cannot fail to be of interest either to the friends or enemies of Great Britain.

Now, consols are subject to the same laws as those which govern commodities generally, viz., those of supply and demand. If supply exceeds demand, the price must fall; if demand exceeds supply, the price must rise.

In considering this question it is desirable to keep always in mind the very obvious fact that there are two factors, supply and demand, and that both are variable. The "supply" of consols depends upon whether the British government is increasing or reducing its debt; and the "demand" for consols depends, inter alia, upon the quantity of surplus money awaiting investment. In order to apply these axioms to the problem of consols, we must first arrive at some conclusion as to the state of supply and demand in 1897 as compared with the present year.

First, there is one point affecting both the supply of and demand for consols that needs clearing up. In England trustees are bound by law to invest in certain specified stocks—called "trustee stocks"—unless the instrument creating the trust expressly gives them discretion to the contrary. This is a valuable law, in that it protects the widow and orphan both from the foolishly speculative and from the unprincipled trustee: for "trustee stocks" are those of the soundest and most gilt-edged type. First among these stocks stand consols, staid, respectable, low-interest yielding but eminently suitable to those to whom certainty of income is the all-in-all of investment.

And beside consols stand Bank of England stock, India stocks, corporation stocks, and the debenture stocks of certain railways, which have paid not less than a certain percentage on their ordinary stocks for not less than a certain number of consecutive years. There were but few others 30 years ago, and the total amount of the whole lot did not amount in 1887 to more than £700,000,000. But since that time in accordance with a general feeling that the scope of investment for trustees was too limited, and also perhaps to improve the market for colonial stocks, a number of these last-named securities were included in the "trustee stocks." The result is that whereas 30 years ago "trustee stocks" amounted only to £700,000,000 sterling they now amount to £2,000,000,000. Thus a trustee now has almost three times the scope he previously had. This does not mean that there was in those days three times the demand for consols that there is now, for other factors enter into consideration, but it does mean a very much lessened demand for what is known in England as the "premier security."

Crisis Affected Demand

That is one part of the question of "demand." Another is that the rate of interest has since 1897 been reduced from 2¾ per cent to 2½ per cent. Let us see what this means. Assuming that a stock yielding 2¾ per cent is worth 113—the price in 1897—a stock yielding only 2½ per cent would be worth 10 per cent less. And this consideration does not end here. Investors are not always governed by the hard logic of arithmetic; 2½ per cent sounds so low, as compared with 3 per cent or 4 per cent security that an investor who is on the lookout for substantial interest as well as safety often passes such a stock by without a second thought.

We have not yet done with "demand." The three or four years preceding 1897 were years of stagnation, following on the "Baring crisis." Credit is a sensitive plant, and had received a severe shock. Enterprise in all parts of the world was in a stagnant state; business people were lying on their oars, so to speak, and waiting for a return of confidence. The South African mines were pouring out gold into a world which did not require it, because it already had more than enough of that commodity. What happened then always has happened, and always will happen in such cases. Rates of interest went down, because there was no demand for money. The prices of securities went up because banks and financial houses, finding that they could not employ their money in trade, had to use it somehow and bought securities. People found out too that it was a profitable thing to buy consols, for instance, which yielded them, say 2½ to 2¾ per cent, with money which cost them only 1½ to 2 per cent, and banks, hard up for general business, were only too glad to help the transaction along. All this operated as a further "demand" for consols.

Since 1897 there have been several trade "booms." Great commercial activity has prevailed. Banks have no longer been obliged to utilize their surplus funds in consols. On the contrary, in order to deal with business demands they have got rid of a great deal of this security, which operation of itself of course has brought down the price. The people who gaily bought the stock to profit by the difference in interest have had to realize too, and have found in the process that the loss of capital has more than wiped out their earlier gains in interest. The movement in fact has been on quite the reverse tack, and a considerable part of the fall we are considering has come about in a purely natural way.

Part of this contrary movement is, of course, due to the South African war. This cost Great Britain and Ireland about £250,000,000 sterling. Where did this vast sum come from? Partly from taxation and partly from borrowing; and both methods of meeting the expense tended to the depreciation of consols. Increased taxation lessened the "demand" for investment; and borrowing increased the supply of consols and kindred stocks; 90,000,000 of consols were issued and 60,000,000 of "war stock."

Moreover, it has always been the laudable custom of the British government to apply a certain sum each year in buying stock and thus reducing the debt. Thus, between 1815, the year which marked the close of the Napoleonic wars, and 1897 the national debt was reduced from £900,000,000 to £645,000,000, notwithstanding an increase during the Crimean war of £30,000,000. During the 40 years that elapsed between 1857 and 1897 nearly £200,000,000 were paid off, an average of nearly £5,000,000 a year. The amount thus applied is always referred to as the sinking fund, and during the Boer war the sinking fund was suspended. Thus the "supply" during those years was not only actually increased by the issue of new stock, but its normal diminution, which in previous years helped to sustain the price, was suspended.

Since the Boer war a large amount of debt has been paid off, and Mr. Lloyd-George recently congratulated the country upon the fact that during the four years of the present government of which he is so prominent a member, £50,000,000 of debt has been paid off. That is a feat, of which he, as chancellor of the exchequer, may justly be proud. At the same time, this operation has not been of much use in keeping up the price of consols. The high death duties in force at the present time in England entail the realization of securities to the value of £25,000,000, per annum. And without entering into the vexed question as to the effect of current legislation upon the financial confidence of the moneyed classes in England, it is obvious that this constant pressure of sales must, in the absence of any countervailing influence, tend to keep the price of consols at a figure which, compared with that ruling in the '90's, must be considered low.

In the writer's opinion the fall in consols should be attributed more to the natural causes which he has attempted to indicate than to any deeply-rooted feeling of distrust, alleged by some to have been caused by recent legislation. The rate of interest is lower than that of any other national stock, and the relative position of national credit should be considered by looking at the prices of the various government stocks if converted to a uniform rate of interest. Taking the current prices of the day and comparing the prices of other nations' chief funds on a uniform basis of interest, it will be found that England still holds the first place.

The following are the prices of the chief government stocks, calculated on a 3 per cent basis: Consols, 2½ per cent, 78⅜; on a 3 per cent basis 94; French, 3 per cent, 92½; on a 3 per cent basis 92½; United States, 4 per cent, 117; on a 3 per cent basis, 87¾; German, 3 per cent, 82¾; on a 3 per cent basis 82¾; Italian 3¾ per cent, 100¾; on a 3 per cent basis 80 3-5.

BADGER STATE LEADS HER SISTERS

Wisconsin Farmers Are Students, and in Some Ways They Surpass All Rivals; State Produces One Fifth of Country's Creamery-Made Butter

The Monitor's state sketches are printed on Wednesdays, and aim to give an historical summary with facts about the resources, progress and prospects of each commonwealth. This "Story of the States" began with a general article on Jan. 11. Each week since a sketch of a state has been given, taking up first the original 13 states; the others will follow in the order of their admission to the Union.

WISCONSIN is noted for its farm and dairy products. The farmers have been helped immensely by the Wisconsin Agricultural Experiment Association, which has about 1500 of them on its membership roll. The benefits of this organization have been manifest in the great improvement in quality and yield of Wisconsin grains, which has been proved by the prizes won at the national corn exposition and other shows, in competition with the best grains from many states. The average yield of Silver King corn (Wisconsin No. 7) grown by 182 members reporting last year was over 59 bushels per acre, against an average of 46 bushels per acre of the best other variety. The maximum yield of this corn was 115 bushels. With barley the results have been fully as remarkable, the average yield being 32 bushels per acre by 280 growers, and with Swedish select oats, there was an average yield of over 45 bushels from 96 growers.

Ten-Year Record

From a United States department of agriculture report it is learned that among 285 states producing 25,000,000 bushels or more of corn during the ten-year period ending 1910, Wisconsin stands fifth, the leading state, Ohio, exceeding her by only 2.4 bushels per acre.

Among the nine states producing 1,000,000 bushels or more of barley, without irrigation, Wisconsin stands first.

Among the 16 states growing 10,000,000 bushels or more of oats, without irrigation, Wisconsin stands first.

Among the seven states producing more than 1,000,000 bushels of spring wheat, without irrigation, Wisconsin stands first.

Among the 13 states producing 500,000 bushels or more of rye Wisconsin stands fourth, three leading her by a trifling difference.

Among the eight states producing 10,000,000 bushels or more of potatoes Wisconsin stands second, led only by a state which uses an enormous amount of commercial fertilizer.

Of all the states reported as producing flax Wisconsin stands first, the above figures all relating to the 10-year period.

Of all the states not using irrigation, according to the table for the 10-year period in hay production, Wisconsin stands fifth.

The statistical tables indicate that Wisconsin leads all non-irrigating states in sugar beets and comes within a ton per acre of equalling the average of the irrigation states.

Dairy Output Large

The best evidence that Wisconsin is admirably adapted to the turning out of the finest dairy products with the greatest economy lies in the fact that the output has been increased in the last 30 years from practically nothing to a value of $78,000,000 in 1910. One fifth of the creamery-made butter in the United States comes from Wisconsin. This is the product of about 1000 creameries, which, with the 1928 cheese factories, represent the dairy manufacturing industry of the Badger state. These factories must be manned with expert operators who are qualified to produce a uniformly high grade from week to week. And the institution that turns out these buttermakers is the dairy school of the college of agriculture of the University of Wisconsin. Back in 1890 a winter course for training young men in making dairy products was established and immediately became popular. The attendance soon reached 100, and for the past 20 years it has averaged 125. Special laboratory practise is given. The rules of the laboratory and creamery are rigorous and maintain the standards which these operators will be required to observe when they occupy positions in commercial factories.

Green Bay Settled Early

Wisconsin today has a population of 2,333,860. Previous to the year 1800 there were not to exceed 200 white persons; but the oldest of Wisconsin's settlements, Green Bay, has a history dating back more than two centuries and a half. For 150 years the history of Green Bay may be said to have been the history of Wisconsin. Situated at the head both of the Great lakes and the Mississippi valley, and drained by interlacing rivers which at their sources so closely approach each other that the canoe-voyager can with ease pass from one great water system to the other, the geographical character of Wisconsin became, very early in the history of New France, an important factor in the development of the West. It was also the meeting place of the Algonkin and Dakotah tribes. In 1634 Champlain, then Governor of New France, sent Jean Nicolet, a woodranger, to make treaties with the Indians and induce them to trade with the French of Quebec and Montreal. Nicolet landed on the site of Green Bay, ascended the Fox river to about the site of Berlin, and thence went overland to Illinois, returning home, doubtless, by way of the Chicago portage and Lake Michigan.

The next recorded visit of whites to Wisconsin was that of the traders Radisson and Groseilliers in 1658-59. They ascended the Fox, and it is believed descended the Wisconsin. There is small reason to doubt that they were the first to set eyes on the upper Mississippi. For upward of a century Wisconsin played an important part in the forest trade of New France, and Indians from here were largely used as allies of the French in the protracted struggle between France and England for the mastery of the continental interior. The first permanent white settlement was made by the Langlade family at Green Bay about the middle of the eighteenth century.

More Rapid Growth

Notwithstanding the treaty of 1783, Great Britain retained possession of the forts on the upper lakes; and Wisconsin being a dependency of Mackinaw, it was practically under British control until the close of the war of 1812-15, although nominally United States territory after 1796. Little by little French predominance was undermined, at first by the advent of Americans into the lead mines (1827), and then by agricultural settlers from New England and New York state. The Black Hawk war (1832), wherein the Sacs were nearly exterminated, was also an important factor in the opening of the region. Settlement and development now began in earnest. The fur trade, after the formation of Wisconsin territory (1836), ceased to be of importance, the non-progressive French element subsided into insignificance, immigrants from the East were attracted by cheap lands on easy terms, and thenceforth Wisconsin was a United States territory in fact as well as in name. It rapidly grew into a patriotic and powerful state, being admitted to the Union in 1848.

Wisconsin has an area of 56,040 square miles, with a coast line on the lakes of over 500 miles. The greater part of the state was originally covered by forest, but in the south and west considerable areas of prairies were found interspersed with woodlands. As already indicated, it is fine farming country. There are large water powers, chiefly on the Fox, Chippewa and Wisconsin rivers and others are being worked by means of reservoirs. Its lumbering interests are specially important. Wisconsin stands well up among the iron-producing states. The lead and zinc region lies in the southwest part of the state; there is a rich supply of building stone, including limestone, red-brown sandstone and granite. The whitefish and lake trout fishing industries of Lake Michigan and Lake Superior are extensive.

The state makes liberal provision for its public schools, for which a fund has been set apart, derived from the proceeds of sales of public lands. The public school system is crowned by the state university at Madison, organized in 1848, which is today exercising a vast influence on the welfare of the state through its teachers, students and methods. The leading denominational colleges are Beloit, Ripon, Milton, Racine and Lawrence University. The state historical society at Madison has a reference library of many thousands and is the richest in the nation upon the history of the Mississippi basin.

Wisconsin was the thirteenth star in the field of blue on our flag. By an interesting coincidence, when the state was called upon to cast its vote for President the voters had to choose between two former presidents. Gen. Zachary Taylor had been stationed for many years as an army officer at Prarie du Chien (Ft. Crawford) and Ft. Winnebago, and had taken part in the Black Hawk war. He went from Wisconsin to win laurels on the battlefields of Mexico. Lewis Cass had served as governor of Michigan Territory when Wisconsin was part of it, and had in many ways identified himself with the material prosperity of Wisconsin. Gen. Zachary Taylor was elected President, but Wisconsin cast its four electoral votes for Lewis Cass, Democratic candidate.

Milwaukee heads the list of Wisconsin cities, with a population of 373,856, an increase of 31 per cent in the past decade; then come Superior, 40,384; Racine, 38,002; La Crosse, 30,417; Oshkosh, 33,062; Sheboygan, 26,398; Madison, 25,531; and Green Bay, 25,236.

Madison, the state capital, is being made "a city beautiful" through the generosity and public interest of its citizens, who have spent hundreds of thousands of dollars upon municipal improvements in the way of parks, playgrounds, etc. The old capitol was demolished to make way for the new $6,000,000 building now in process of construction. From the square on which the capitol is situated radiate streets named for the signers of the Declaration of Independence. The new structure is a St. Andrews cross of white granite; even the dome, built of concrete and steel, is to be covered with the beautiful white granite of Vermont. The four wings are of equal area and height, facing the cardinal points of the compass, 125 feet in width and 85 feet high. The front of each wing is to be topped by a massive pediment resting on six granite columns of Corinthian style. The rotuda is covered by a dome, which, when completed, will be 280 feet high. It is to be crowned by an allegorical figure representing Wisconsin. The capitol is on a commanding eminence of over 14 acres, lying between two lovely lakes.

RATIONAL GOLF

By JASON ROGERS

It is curious how the Australasian brothers Pearce have set their mark upon the coast of Aberdeenshire, the one, the younger and left-hander, winning the tournament at Cruden, and the right-handed elder, Clyde Pearce, winning at Peterhead by a defeat in the final heat, of that staunch golfer, J. A. Shaw, writes Horace Hutchinson in the London Telegraph. All our visitors who come from far have thus something, besides the pleasant memories which they left and which we hope they have also taken with them, by which to remember Europe, for has not Mr. Evans carried with him to America the trophy of the French amateur championship? So all is very much as it should be, for we may be glad that they should not return with only empty honor, and yet should have felt just the least in the world sore had one of them taken our amateur championship across the sea.

The record has just been broken at Gullane by that long driver, Robertson-Durham. His score was 72, a genuine score, made in a competition when the object was to make a good score—not to win a match. So it "counts for good," as an American would say, and it was better than the former best by a stroke. This score was made on what is called the "first course" at Gullane. The changes that have been made in the various courses at Gullane and Luffness are so many that it is hardly within the wit of any man who is not of the Lothians born and bred, to follow and carry them in his head, but there is no doubt that that which is commonly called the "new course" at Gullane is a very fine one indeed. There are those who say that it is the finest in the world, but there are not many who believe them. It is enough, avoiding comparisons, to say that it is of the first class. And, indeed, all this country round and about Gullane hill is very splendid natural links, with turf kept fine by the rabbits, at little expense to the green committee, and bunkers in the original sandy state in which nature made them. It is country that Providence has evidently laid down with a special eye for the golfer. And when you arrive at the top of Gullane hill you see a view which is not easily matched—far out to the May island and over all the rocky islets that guard the entry of the Firth of Forth to the eastward, westward up that great waterway as far as the Forth bridge itself, and even beyond again, and both north and south a widespread prospect of rolling and ever mountainous country. If the day is fine and you happen to be a hole or two up, it is hardly possible to conceive a more entrancing outlook.

Bernard Darwin is captain of the London Press Golfing Society, "and a right good captain, too." Among the privileges attached to that high office is that of giving a cup to the society, for competition by its members. This was played for the other day, on the Porter's Park course, at Radlett, under "bogey" conditions, and it resulted in a tie between Mr. Darwin himself, giver of the cup, and Hal Ludlow. Mr. Darwin had a penalty handicap of four; Mr. Ludlow was penalized, too, and both found "bogey" too good for them by two hiles, but the common enemy was by even greater odds too good for all the rest. This high position of two penalized men equal first looks as if the less illustrious golfers of the pressmen were hardly treated with all the consideration due to them by the handicappers. A graceful withdrawal from further part in the contest by the captain and donor left the cup with Mr. Ludlow.

ENGEL EXCELS AS AMFORTAS

Proportion of Germans at Bayreuth Larger This Year Than Formerly

BAYREUTH—The Bayreuth festival opened this year on July 22 with a performance of "The Meistersinger." The festival consists of two cycles of "Der Ring des Nibelungen," seven single performances of "Parsifal" and five of "Die Meistersinger von Nurnberg." The charm of the opera is no doubt considerably heightened not only by the comfort with which the audience can listen, for the theater is built so that every one of the 1500 persons present can see and hear perfectly, but the hours are so arranged that each act is followed by an interval of three quarters of an hour or an hour, in which one can have a modest if somewhat hurried meal at one of the restaurants close by, and walk or sit in the garden and woods which surround the theater, returning home not later than 10:15 p. m.

During the first two days of the present festival the theater has been the coolest place in Bayreuth. The increase in the percentage of Germans among the audience is very remarkable, for whereas in former years, the foreigners by far outnumbered the Germans, this year the foreigners are decidedly in the minority.

Dr. Richter Conducts

Dr. Hans Richter conducted the first performance of "Die Meistersinger," which is equivalent to saying that the playing of the orchestra was magnificent, and that the whole opera was conducted to a superb close without a hitch of any kind. The principal performers were:

Hans Sachs.....Hermann Weil
Beckmesser.....Heinrich Schultz
David.....Karl Siegler
Walther v. Stolzing..Walther Kirchhoff
Eva.....Lilly Hafren-Waag
Magdalena.....Eisela Standigi

Stage Not Ably Managed

The Walther of Herr Kirchhoff was an eminently satisfactory performance. His voice is full and powerful, giving one the impression of there being a great deal of reserve, and he is a good but very quiet actor. Herr Weil, although he sang well, and has a pleasant voice, could not sufficiently grasp the sympathy and beningnity of Hans Sachs' character, and the part fell a good deal out of the picturesque in consequence. On the other hand Beckmesser in the hands of Heinrich Schultz became a real person, not a stage farce as he is so often represented. Fraulein Hafren-Waag has a fine voice and has avoided the pitfall of the tremolo which ruins so many Wagner singers. She needs rather more vivacity in the part, but her appearance in the last act was beautiful. She might have walked straight out of a canvas by Titian.

The stage management and the lighting were, as usual, quite perfect, and the arrangement and singing of those stupendous choruses most remarkable. The close of a notable performance left one marveling more than ever at the genius which produced a comic opera of such inexhaustible beauty, such wealth of harmony and power.

Interpretation Powerful

It is difficult to approach "Parsifal" with the cool head of the critic. It appeals so vividly to the imagination, to those fundamental emotions which are touched by the old stories of the Bible heroes, dealing as it does with the broad issues of the conflict between good and evil in the human consciousness, that the details of any particular performance fall somewhat into the background.

Judged by former standards, the present production of the work probably compares very favorably. The orchestra under Dr. Muck gave a very broad majestic interpretation of the music, and the choruses were exquisitely sung. Of the individual performers Richard Mayr of Vienna as Gurnemanz and Anna Bahr-Mildenburg as Kundry stand out preeminently as magnificent in their most trying and difficult parts. Both as singers and actors they were completely satisfying.

The Parsifal of Ernest Van Dyck fell far behind, owing to his forcing of the tremolo, so that while as an actor he showed his experience, his mastery of his art, the harshness of the voice is a continual jar.

Werner Engel as Amfortas was sympathetic and intelligent, though the general opinion seemed to be that his voice and general physique were not strong enough for the part. But he seemed to bring home the idea of the character in its passionate appeal for compassion and healing in a manner few stronger singers have attained.

It is perhaps a significant fact that the violent colors and monstrous flowers of former magic-gardens have given place to a much more harmonious scheme of coloring.

Altogether the two first performances of the present festival have left an impression of high attainment and of great beauty.

PLAN ARTS BUILDING IN CHICAGO

CHICAGO—A twenty-story building, to be known as the New Liberal Arts building, is to be erected by the heirs of Joseph E. Otis on East Van Buren street, on the site of the Athenaeum building, which is to be torn down. The building will contain stores, studios and recital halls and will cost about $1,500,000.

WHAT THE SHEARS SAY

FROST ON THE PUMPKIN

The frost will soon in whiteness lie
Upon the pumpkin picked for pie.
—Baltimore Star

MOVABLE ROOM

"I don't like it on the fifth floor. Put me on the sixth floor."

"You had the fourth floor yesterday," said the proprietor of the summer hotel. "If you want to change floors every night I'll let you have the elevator to sleep in. The operator will stop it at any floor you like."—Washington Herald.

HIS SUBSTITUTE

"You never learned to sing or play the violin?"

"No," replied Mr. Simpson. "What's the use of going to all that trouble? Whenever I feel that the neighborhood is too quiet I get out the lawn mower."—Washington Herald.

WHO IS BARKIS?

A New York newspaper wired its Washington office: "Name a good man to go with Roosevelt for the paper on his long trip West."

"Who is this new man Barkis we've got over in the Washington office?" asked the telegraph editor of the managing editor when the despatch came in.—Saturday Evening Post.

AWAKENED THE TOURIST

One day, while the late William R. Travers was sojourning at a well-known resort, he came to the wharf to see the arrivals. Meeting an acquaintance, he said:

"Ah, Merrill, what brings you down here?"

"Oh, just came for a little change and rest."

"Sorry to discourage you," said Travers; "but I'm afraid you'll go home without either."

"How's that?" said Merrill.

"Oh," said Travers, "the waiters will get all the change, and the landlord will get all the rest."—Christian Register.

IN THE HIGHLANDS.

"Is land high in Vermont?" asked a speculator of an old Green mountain farmer.

"I should think it is," was the reply; "if the trees weren't so stunted, the clouds couldn't get by at all."—Christian Register.

DINING THE QUINCYS

When Josiah Quincy was president of Harvard University, his son was president of the common council of Boston. At a social gathering they were toasted as "the two President Quincys."

The younger Quincy arose first to reply seriously, even solemnly. He said: "I wish to be courteous, but I cannot submit to anything derogatory to my own dignity. You have been pleased to allude to two President Quincys. I beg you will bear in mind that the gentleman at the head of the table presides only over a parcel of beardless boys, while I preside over a body of grand and influential men."—Christian Register.

TIME TAKEN UP

"How did you like the opera?"

"I don't know a thing about it."

"But you were there—I saw you."

"Yes, but I was in a box party."—Columbus (O.) Citizen.

WILLIE'S POINT OF VIEW

Ma—Is the clock running, Willie?

ELIZABETH CITY CAROL

The Daily Press does not claim much erudition in the line of poetical criticism, but, according to the football editor, who has been "doing" society since the warm weather set in, the following gem from an Elizabeth City poet puts it over all other verse that has reached this office lately in point of rhyme and rhythm, sweet sentiment, musical meter, caressing cadences and all that sort of thing. Here it is:

"Little beds of flowers,
Little coats of paint,
Make a pleasant cottage

CONSIDERATE BOSS

"I certainly have a considerate boss."

"How now?"

"Gave me a two weeks' vacation, and three days extra to rest up."—Washington Herald.

REALISTIC

The Customer (trying phonograph)—There's something wrong with these grand opera records. There's a horrible racket in each one that spoils the effect.

The Demonstrator—Ah, yes. One of our latest effects. That's the conversation in the boxes. Wonderfully realistic.—Chicago Daily News.

IDAHO TO EXCHANGE LAND

WASHINGTON—Idaho and the department of agriculture have reached a tentative agreement, by which the state will receive about 500,000 acres of land in a compact body in place of its scattered school sections now embraced within the bounds of national forests.

REPEAT FARMERS' SCHOOL

PETERSBURG, Ill.—The school of agriculture, inaugurated last year at Old Salem Chautauqua, near here, and which proved to be a success, is to be held again this year, Aug. 15 to 30.

Navy Notes

While the reports of the experts who have been watching the operations of the battleships, torpedo destroyers and submarines in the neighborhood of Provincetown have not yet reached the navy department, the officials of the division of material do not hesitate to say there is not the slightest probability of the abandonment of the use of dirigible torpedoes in naval warfare as a result of what has developed. They insist that the torpedo has been greatly improved in recent years, not only in the matter of speed and range but also in accuracy of direction. It is true that in rare instances the automatic steering gear of the torpedo has blocked itself, causing the weapon to take an erratic course, but through the use of small gyroscope within the shell it is generally possible to hold the torpedo on a very accurate course. It is assumed that owing to the fact that the range of use of the weapon has been exended from 500 yards to near 4000 there will be more misses of the target, but even if one out of four or five torpedoes finds its mark the experts will be entirely satisfied.

STOCKS ERRATIC AND ACTIVE IN TODAY'S MARKET

CALUMET SELLS OFF

Commission houses certainly have nothing to complain of these days if activity is what they have been wanting in the stock market. For stocks have not only been active but have fluctuated widely, permitting good profits if the trader happens to be on the right side.

Union Pacific was a prominent feature this morning. Its course was very erratic and its early tendency was downward. In fact the entire market was weak and active. Southern Pacific was quite heavy. Losses during the first sales amounted to a point or more for the active issues. At the end of the first half hour a good recovery had set in. Calumet & Hecla declined again on the local exchange, reaching a new low level for the movement and the lowest since 1903. The rest of the market was irregular and weak.

Stocks held fairly steady toward midday, prices ranging close to last night's closing figures. Union Pacific opened off ¾ at 181, declined to 180¾, rose to 181¼, again declined to 180¾ and then advanced more than a point. Southern Pacific was off ⅜ at the opening at 118. It declined to 117⅛ and improved a fraction.

Reading opened off ⅜ at 151, declined to 150½, advanced to 151¼, declined to 150⅝ and then rose more than a point, or to about last night's closing price. Steel moved within a fractional range around 75. Texas Company opened off 1⅛ at 102⅛ and advanced to 107 before midday.

American Beet Sugar opened off ⅜ at 50¾ and then advanced more than a point. Amalgamated Copper opened up ⅛ at 64⅜ and after shading off moved up a good fraction.

Calumet & Hecla on the local exchange opened unchanged at 425 and then declined to 520. North Butte opened off ¼ at 30½ and advanced well above 31. Copper Range opened up ¼ at 58½ and rose a point. Utah Copper was up ⅛ at the opening at 46⅛ and improved a good fraction. Shoe Machinery was very weak. It opened unchanged at 45½ and declined more than 2 points before midday.

Stocks continued downward during the afternoon. At the beginning of the last hour the active issues had lost all of their advance and were a point or more below the opening figures. Some were hovering around the lowest prices of the year. Texas Company declined 3 points and Chesapeake & Ohio 2 points.

On the local exchange Shoe Machinery was forced under 43. Superior Copper was off 3¾ at 27¼. U. S. Smelters declined from 36 to 34½ before 2 o'clock. The general tone was heavy.

LONDON—In the closing dealings on the stock exchange today oppressive heat had an influence in narrowing operations.

Gilt-edged investments proved superior to harder discounts, but there was no symptom of recovery in home rails owing to the fact that the dock strike is spreading to considerable extent.

Foreigners displayed a steady tone, but American railway shares were narrow and sluggish, and sales for both accounts occurred in mining shares.

PASSENGER RECEIPTS LARGER

The passenger department of the Boston & Albany road reports receipts for July, 1911, $46,000 in excess of July, 1910, practically a record for the road.

THE WEATHER

UNITED STATES WEATHER BUREAU PREDICTIONS FOR BOSTON AND VICINITY: Fair tonight and Thursday; moderate southwest to westerly winds.

WASHINGTON—The U. S. weather bureau predicts weather today as follows for New England: Generally fair tonight and Thursday; slightly cooler tonight.

There is no well defined storm area east of the Rocky mountains, but several minor disturbances are causing considerable cloudy and unsettled weather, with occasional light local showers. An area of high pressure moving in from the northwest is producing pleasant weather and lower temperatures in that section. This vicinity is now on the southern edge of the disturbance that is passing out the St. Lawrence valley. Warm, muggy weather prevails generally east of the Mississippi river.

Conditions favor for this vicinity cloudy weather, with slight chance of local showers, followed by fair.

COAL FIND ON MORGAN LAND

TRINIDAD, Col.—A big vein of coal has been unearthed on the property of the Wotten Land & Fuel Company, which is owned almost entirely by J. P. Morgan. The vein is said to have been proved for a distance of a mile back toward the hills, where it runs so deep under cover that further proof is impracticable. The opening of the new measure will be less than 200 per cent from the tipple of the Turner mines.

Pennsylvania's new $4,000,000 freight yard at Northumberland, employing 2000 men, has been opened.

WESTERN UNION'S LARGER EARNINGS

Western Union opened the first month of its new fiscal year, July, with a very satisfactory gain in gross of slightly better than 10 per cent. This means an income increase of almost $300,000 for the month and is somewhat better than the rate of gross gain for all of the 12 months to June 30.

For its late fiscal year gross income was above $36,500,000 compared with $33,889,202 in 1910 and $30,541,072 in 1909, the first year in which American Telephone management was applied to this almost moribund corporation. Could a gross gain of 10 per cent as shown in July be held during the 1912 fiscal year it would mean gross receipts of $40,000,000. This is not expected, however, in view of the state of general business and in face of the fact that the Postal Telegraph Company is experiencing decreases in its gross receipts.

For its late fiscal year Western Union experienced a decrease in net of about $525,000, equal to a loss of ½ per cent on the stock. This decrease is explained wholly by the fact that wages of employees have been advanced at the rate of about $2,500,000 per annum and that nearly $700,000 was expended on rehabilitation of offices and buying new furniture during the 12 months. The wonder is that net earnings were not smaller. As it is the company is earning at the rate of 2 per cent to 2½ per cent above its 3 per cent dividend even after allowing for these extraordinary expenditures mentioned above.

BORROW FROM BANKERS HERE

NEW ORLEANS—The proposed loan of $30,000,000 which the Guatemalan government has had under consideration for more than a year is to be placed with American bankers, probably within the next four months. This positive announcement is made by Senor Joaquin Mendez, the newly appointed Guatemalan minister to the United States, who is en route to Washington.

Senor Mendez declared that Guatemala is today experiencing the most substantial prosperity in her history. Millions of American capital, he said, have been invested there within the last few years, new railways are being constructed and through the American syndicate the vast mineral resources of the country are assured of early development. He said he could not state at this time what bankers would take the loan.

DIVIDENDS

The Philadelphia Electric Company declared a regular quarterly dividend of 1½ per cent, payable Sept. 15 as registered Aug. 15. Books do not close.

GOVERNMENT'S REPORT ON THE CEREAL CROPS

WASHINGTON—Average condition of corn on Aug. 1 was 69.6 against 80.1 on July 1 last, 79.3 on Aug. 1, 1910, and 84.4 on Aug. 1, 1909.

Average condition of oats on Aug. 1 was 65.7 against 68.8 on July 1 last, 81.5 on Aug. 1, 1910, and 85.5 on Aug. 1, 1909.

The average condition of spring wheat on Aug. 1 was 59.8 against 73.8 on July 1 last, 61 on Aug. 1, 1910 and 91.6 on Aug. 1, 1909.

The report of the department of agriculture estimates a winter wheat yield about 14.5 bushels per acre, or a total of 465,149,000 bushels as compared with 465,000,000 finally estimated last year, and 450,130,000, the annual average production in the past five years.

The amount of oats on farms Aug. 1 is estimated at 5.7 per cent of last year's crop or about 64,342,000 bushels as compared with 63,249,000 bushels on Aug. 1, 1910, and 52,663,000 the average on farms Aug. 1 for the past five years.

The preliminary estimate of the production of rye is 30,677,000 bushels, as compared with 33,039,000 bushels last year, and 32,414,000, the annual production in the last five years.

ECONOMIES OF DIAMOND MATCH

NEW YORK—For the first six months of the current year earnings of the Diamond Match Company, after charges for depreciation, were $879,490, compared with $779,474 in the first half of 1910. The rate of increase to date over the same period a year ago is about 13 per cent. Although business has been satisfactory, the better showing is largely due to economies in management and operation. There is, of course, no reason to suppose that such saving cannot be continued. With prospects of good business, the fiscal year, as a whole, should show net earnings considerably in excess of 1910.

The following gives total profits, net earnings, per cent available for dividends, and yearly surplus since 1905 (1911 estimate*):

	Total profits.	Net earnings.	Avail for divid.	Yearly surplus.
1911*	$2,450,000	$2,050,000	12.85%	$940,000
1910	2,221,668	1,850,482	11.56	740,482
1909	2,196,877	1,767,646	11.04	187,646
1908	2,279,911	1,804,724	11.8	214,576
1907	2,610,836	2,296,076	14.85	696,076

*Estimated.

These figures show that the Diamond Match Company is able to maintain a higher dividend rate than the 6 per cent now paid. The management has promised the stockholders that unless some unforeseen contingency should arise in the first quarter of 1912 the rate would be increased to 7 per cent, or an extra dividend of 1 per cent paid. The extra disbursement will quite likely be in the latter form.

THE GRAIN MARKET

C. F. & G. W. Eddy, Inc., of the Boston Chamber of Commerce, received the following from their Chicago correspondent:

Wheat—The foreign markets were strong this morning. Liverpool was up about a penny on the Russian situation and fear of damage in Winnipeg. The American markets opened up about ⅛ cent, but soon lost the advance. There was considerable selling again on account of the improvement in the tenor of the northwestern reports. A good deal of wheat has been put on the market by houses who were bullish on the way up, and the crop experts did not seem to be quite so insistent on extreme damage conditions. The report of the Northwestern Miller reiterating its estimate of 160,000,000 to 175,000,000 bushels based on the opinion of conservative men in touch with the conditions in the three states caused some little selling.

The weather conditions are somewhat better. There were some indications of clearing weather and clear conditions are needed in the Northwest, both to complete harvest and to thresh wheat already cut.

Corn—Market was moderately active and steady. The weather conditions were considered favorable, but there was very little disposition to operate very freely on account of the government report this afternoon. The trade seemed to be evening up.

Oats—Prices were fairly steady in oats with the market showing very little change. Weather conditions were fairly satisfactory, and the receipts of oats continue liberal. With the government report coming out today, there was very little disposition to trade heavily.

Plans have been completed for construction of a $400,000 Union station at Fishkill, N. Y., for the joint use of New York Central and Central New England.

CONFIDENCE IN WOOL OUTLOOK HAS TENDENCY TO INCREASE

Merchants Expect a Larger Demand From Manufacturers as Soon as Current Tariff Discussion Ceases, Whether Revision Prevails or Is Defeated

Confidence in the ultimate disposal of this year's wool clip at a fair price is increasing, despite the drawbacks that have attended attempts to expedite its transfer from the producer to the mills thus far.

Throughout the trade, from the primary market to the retail dealer in textile fabrics, it is very well understood that both wool and woolen goods are in comparatively limited supply.

Discussion of the tariff program and of mercantile affairs related to the wool industry has also tended to acquaint the general consumer with the fact that there has been, to say the least, no surplus production of any kind of woolens or worsteds during the past year or two.

The natural inference, therefore, is that when the issues now dominant as factors in the trade are settled, whatever may be the outcome, a buying movement, based upon the then existing status of affairs in the wool market, will at once be inaugurated.

Although enough users of wool are anticipating such a turn of affairs to make up a fairly large volume of purchases from week to week, enough others continue their policy of conservatism to make it pretty certain that they will have heavy requirements to satisfy if they regain confidence and renew their buying in the near future.

Receipts of wool in the past month or more have been quite large, and total Boston receipts are now close to 200,000,000 pounds for the year to date, with nearly three-fourths of the aggregate made up of domestic clips. Last year domestic receipts here to date were nearly 50,000,000 pounds less than they have been this season. Foreign receipts, however, ran heavier, so that the actual difference in combined totals in a comparison of wool arrivals from both sources is around 35,000,000 pounds. Shipments are a little under last year's figures.

The calls for stock in this market embrace a great variety. Territories and fleeces both attract much attention from inquirers and samplers, and pulled and scoured wools are in considerable request. The demand also takes a wider range in the matter of grade. Some of the lower qualities find a readier market this year than usual. This is due to the insistent demand for lower cost on clothing, following the general trend of demand for a lessening of the cost of living.

Much wool changes hands in the original bags, buyers doing their own grading or taking the lots at their general averages. Considerable of the Northwest wool arriving is disposed of in this manner. For fine staple Montana, however, the quoted price is around 21@23 cents per pound, with medium choice at 23@24 cents.

SHIPMENTS OF CURRENCY LESS THAN EXPECTED

Chicago Reports July Movement Smaller Than a Year Ago and Slightly Larger Than Two Years Ago

CHICAGO—Considering the early harvest, last month's currency shipments of $7,500,000 were smaller than expected, $1,700,000 less than a year ago and only $400,000 more than two years ago. July shipments last year were also smaller than predicted. There was a partial crop failure in the Northwest last season, as this season.

Call for currency for moving crops is never raised here before August, but this year was supposed to be an exception, as the season was ahead of its time. August shipments average half as large again as July, and the apex is reached in September or October. These three months last year made following comparisons with previous year:

August shipments, $13,250,000, or $2,750,000 increase; September, $17,640,000, or $4,700,000 decrease; October, $22,100,000, or $300,000 decrease. Receipts from the East were $9,000,000 for those three months combined last year, and $12,500,000 the previous year. Receipts from the interior the same period were $19,150,000 last year and $18,500,000 in 1909, net losses being $24,800,000 and $24,270,000, respectively. Net loss for all of last year was $39,800,000, or nearly $1,000,000 less than that of 1909.

The first seven months of 1911 showed a net gain of $4,267,572 compared with a net loss of $5,580,000 a year ago, when shipments aggregated $5,580,000, receipts from East $10,140,000 and receipts from country $49,860,000. The year's currency movement by months:

	Shipped.	Receipts from East.	Other receipts.
January	$6,414,000	$2,350,000	$13,877,330
February	7,425,210	624,500	6,013,930
March	8,703,135	2,854,000	8,072,795
April	18,183,050	194,000	8,357,100
May	8,082,115	214,000	8,802,725
June	11,895,580	210,000	7,511,925
Total	$63,344,083	$7,694,500	$59,917,155

TRUNK LIMIT POSTPONED

CHICAGO—Railroads have postponed adoption of 40-inch trunk limit to July 1, 1914, but have adopted a 45-inch limit effective July 1, 1912. This is regarded as a concession by the railroads to commercial interests.

NEW FINANCING FOR ATCHISON

Atchison has decided to create a $100,000,000 convertible bond issue. President Ripley in a communication to shareholders says "ample provision of this character seems wise, although at this date it is not anticipated that there will be immediate resort to this method of financing."

Stockholders, however, at the forthcoming annual meeting Oct. 26, 1911, will be asked to approve an issue of $100,289,000 convertible bonds which directors may from time to time issue under such terms and conditions as they themselves deem expedient.

SHIPPING NEWS

A fast return trip to the fishing grounds was made by the schooner Monarch, which arrived at T wharf early this morning with 18,000 fresh mackerel, mostly small. The Monarch sailed for Middle Banks at 10 a. m. Tuesday, captured small schools of mackerel and returned in less than 24 hours.

Mackerel arrivals at T wharf today were: Steamer Bethulia 2000 fresh, Pinta 8000, Ralph L. Hall 14,000, Victor 7000 and the Monarch 18,000. All of the mackerel were mostly tinkers. Dealers purchased the fish for: Large 30 cents apiece, medium 20 cents and small or "tinkers" 8½ to 10 cents.

Besides the fresh mackerel at T wharf today, there was considerable salted, the schooner Ralph L. Hall having 12 barrels salt tinkers, Victor 38 barrels, Pinta 23 barrels, and Monarch 23 barrels large.

Only one swordfish arrival reached T wharf today, the schooner Diana having 30 fish. Dealers offered 10 cents per pound, but they remain unsold.

Fourteen groundfish arrivals are tied up at T wharf today, the schooner Aspinet having the banner catch of 79,000 pounds. Others were: Mary J. Ward 4600 punds, Thomas Brundage 22,000, Fannie Belle Atwood 66,300, Washakie 48,000, Josephine DeCosta 47,000, Louisa R. Sylva 48,000, Annie Perry 45,000, Emily Sears 18,400, Maxwell 4000, F. A. Oakes 1800, steamer Spral 45,700, Olivia Sears 3700 and the Josie & Phebe, which arrived too late to be reported.

Fairly high prices prevailed at T wharf today, dealers paying per hundredweight for steak cod $9, market cod $4.25, haddock $2.25, pollock $4.50, large hake $3.25, medium hake $2 and cusk $3.25.

Despite the fog which prevailed along the New England coast yesterday the Leyland liner Bohemian, Captain McCallum, from Liverpool, pushed up to her berth in the afternoon and is today discharging her cargo. She had 101 cabin passengers and a dozen returning cattlemen, most of them college students. Among the passengers were Mr. and Mrs. John Anderson and Miss E. Whittaker.

Discharging a large general cargo today, the Red Star line steamer Manitou, Captain Pollard, arrived here yesterday from Antwerp with 120 cabin passengers. Included in her passenger list were Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Nason and the Misses Evelyn and Helen Nason, Mr. and Mrs. F. H. Taylor, Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Stillman and the Misses Minna and D. M. Stillman.

For several weeks the steamer Bunker Hill will be out of commission as a result of the damage sustained recently through striking on Nobska point. The steamer North Land will be transferred from the Portland-New York service to the Boston run to take the place of the Bunker Hill, according to a report.

WINNIPEG—J. J. RUSSIAN PLAY TROOPS AKIN TO BOY SCOUTS

AIM HIGHER LEVEL

(Special to the Monitor)

ST. PETERSBURG—On the parade ground of the senior regiment of the Russian army, the Preobrazhensky regiment, the first boy companies or "play troops," the Russian equivalent to the English boy scouts, will be reviewed by the Czar this summer.

This movement, the object of which is to train boys to be useful citizens, has been started by the Czar himself, who, having read Gen. Baden-Powell's books on boy scouts, ordered them to be translated into Russian and distributed 25,000 copies among those interested in the idea.

As has been fully realized by the government, the Russian people are not ready for the boy scout scheme as it has been developed in the British empire, but taking the main idea of the scheme, that of making boys into citizens imbued with the principles of loyalty to their country, they have linked it to the history of Russia and of her rulers.

"Play Troops" Not New

These newly formed boy companies are to be known as "play troops," and it is because of this appellation that every Russian boy scout will recognize himself as peculiarly a servant of the Czar and of his country.

"Poteshny voysko" or "play troops" was the name given to a military troop of noblemen's sons, the playmates of Peter the Great when a boy, whom he organized and equipped. The Czar Paul also had a company of "play troops" at Gachina in his boyhood, but from that time to this the idea fell into oblivion.

The method by which the Russian government hopes to come into contact with the boys throughout the country is by placing in every elementary school a retired non-commissioned officer to act very much in the same capacity as a drill sergeant in an English school.

No weapons will be given to the boys, but they will learn military marching and drilling; but above all the duty of the sergeant will be to instil into the boys sentiments of loyalty to their country, and love for her history, as well as respect for the government, all of which have been much neglected in the education of the Russian boy of the middle and lower classes.

By this it may be seen that what Russia is aiming at is to raise to a higher level the morals of the coming generation, to give the boys in Russian schools something else to thrive on than continual discontent and criticism of those in authority.

Czar Encourages

The scheme though but in its inception is already gaining ground throughout the land, and the Czar, by way of encouragement, promised to review the first school adopting it, which proved to be one in far-away Crimea.

Though Russia is the first country to officially sanction the boy scout idea General Baden-Powell has the satisfaction of seeing it spread in nearly every country. Even Japan has made inquiries through her representatives at the coronation of King George, General Nogi and Admiral Togo, concerning the movement, and it is not improbable that some scheme suited to Japanese modes of life will be inaugurated in that country.

Speaking solely of Europe, Norway, Italy, Belgium, and Holland have taken up the scheme most enthusiastically, while in Sweden, the well-known explorer, Dr. Sven Hedin, is at the head of the boy scouts. Turning to America we find that the United States has outdistanced the United Kingdom in point of numbers, while in the South American states, especially Chile, the growth of the movement has been very marked.

COTTON GROWING EXPECTED WHEN SUDAN IRRIGATED

Possibility of Watering the Vast Gezira Area by Dam Will Be Proved by Pumping Station on Blue Nile

(Special to the Monitor)

KHARTOUM—Reference has already been made in these columns to the scheme for irrigation of the Gezira by a dam constructed at Sennar. The Gezira is the triangular tract of country lying to the south of Khartoum between the Blue and White Niles, its base being formed by a line drawn between Sennar and Kosti.

A dam at Sennar would allow of the irrigation of practically the whole of that vast area, although the project would involve a vast expenditure. In order, therefore, to illustrate the value of the tract when subjected to irrigation, a large pumping station is being constructed on the Blue Nile, four miles from Wad Medani, which will allow of the irrigation of at any rate a portion of the area. It is confidently expected that the land will produce excellent cotton.

STEADY GROWTH OF STATE IS TOLD IN LATEST CENSUS

(Special to the Monitor)

ADELAIDE, S. Aus.—The first count in connection with the recent census of the commonwealth gives the total population of the state of South Australia on April 2, 1911, as 411,161.

Taking the records for the last three decades, it is seen that there has been a steady and substantial advance in the number of persons resident in this state. From 1881 to 1891 the increase was 40,566, between 1891 and 1901 there was an increase of 42,173, while the latest figures show a net gain of 48,004 since 1901.

There are many factors now at work which should result in a very large addition to the population during the next few years. The period of continued prosperity which is being enjoyed by the state has made work plentiful; the active policy of the government in opening up new agricultural areas is furnishing opportunities for home-making; and the revival of assisted immigration makes it easy for those who are attracted by the conditions of life in South Australia to become settlers in this state.

LONDON REFUSE FILLS 80,404 VANS

(Special to the Monitor)

LONDON—It is estimated that for the purpose of washing and watering the streets and courts of the city of London during 1910, 65,965,997 gallons of water were used, and the amount of refuse carted filled 80,404 vans.

The sum of £304 ($1520) was realized from the sale of refuse carted from bins and £467 ($2335) was made by selling waste paper. Another interesting item contained in the report published recently is the sale of tin found among the refuse, which fetched £188 ($940).

CORONATION CROWDS RAILWAY

(Special to the Monitor)

LONDON — Lord Aberconway in presiding over a meeting of the Metropolitan railway explained that in spite of decreases in traffic in other directions, and of increased competition, the coronation festivities had had the effect of raising the number of passengers carried by the railway no less than 560,420 above the number carried during the corresponding half of last year.

AIRMEN WATCHED IN GREAT BRITISH RACE AS THEY END STAGE

(Special to the Monitor)

HARROGATE, Eng.—All roads led to Harrogate on the day of the first stage of the great air race for £10,000 ($50,000) organized by the London Daily Mail. A glorious sunset the evening before gave promise of a perfect "flying" morning and the promise was well fulfilled, for those of us who took the road to Harrogate just after 5 o'clock were greeted with cloudless skies and an atmosphere clear and still.

Cyclists at first were few and far between, but as we sped along, now here, now there, they silently came out of the side roads into the broad highway, and the warning bell, as the more energetic overtook the more leisurely, rang out with increasing frequency.

The view of the world-famous Wharfe valley with the rising sun striking red across from the vale of York and lighting up the rugged outline of Great Alms Crag, was alone worth coming to see, but we had to be at Harrogate by 7 o'clock, so we raced along and the two of our party on the tandem took Pool Bank at 30 miles an hour and then the fun began.

Crowds Gather

From east and west and south came the crowd: footmen and women in hundreds, cyclists in thousands, motor cars, char-a-bancs carts wagons anything on wheels—one long steady stream winding its sinuous way up hill and down dale like nothing as much as the chalk rod to Epsom on Derby day.

And so we came to Harrogate, and Harrogate was making history, and the great crowd which covered the famous Stray seemed to be conscious of the thought.

The airmen did not keep us waiting, for scarcely had we reached the course when a great shout of "There's one," only heard at flying meetings, burst from the mighty concourse and all eyes were turned in one direction toward a little black speck in the sky away to the south—a speck that increased in size with amazing swiftness.

Morning Mist Pierced

On it came through the early morning mist, like a mighty albatross with the sun glistening on its long white wings, sweeping toward us serene and free, and we cheered and cheered again and yet again as Vedrines on his Morane-Borel monoplane with a wonderful grace planed down into the middle of the vast arena—182 miles in 3 hours 3 minutes.

Andre Beaumont came next, only a few minutes behind Vedrines, and then the Englishman Valentine, and then we waited long and patiently for Hamel, the next arrival, who did not appear on the sky line till 9:22; but there was always something to do, something to look at and talk about and the many thousands spread themselves out in all directions and joyously prepared to make a day of it.

Cody arrived in his gigantic biplane weighing nearly half a ton at 12 o'clock, and then as matters turned out, as far as flying was concerned the day was over.

But the crowd was possessed of an angler's soul and hour after hour they still lingered on. Rumor was busy in all directions—Vedrines had reached Newcastle with Beaumont close behind him—Pixton was in a cornfield five miles to the south and so on and so on. Thus the interest was kept alive and time wore on and we went away for refreshment and returned again and sat around and talked till the sun went down, and then at last the great crowd dispersed and all roads now led away from Harrogate and the "Stray" was deserted save for the million or so of discarded newspapers strewn broadcast over its green surface.

BUDGET TO SHOW SURPLUS

(Special to the Monitor)

LONDON—According to a white paper which has just been issued, the Indian budget estimates for 1911-12 anticipate a surplus of £819,200; a decrease of £2,722,000 in net revenue is, however, expected, owing to the reduced sales of opium, consequent on the agreement with China restricting the export of opium to that country.

EMPRESS TO RIDE AT HEAD OF HER OWN REGIMENTS

(Special to the Monitor)

BERLIN—At the three Kaiser parades of the eleventh and the second corps of guards in Germany, which will take place this year in August and September, the Empress in colonel's uniform will ride at the head of her regiment of fusiliers before her husband and commander-in-chief at Altona, and at Stettin she will command the eighty-second cuirassiers. The Empress is honorary colonel of both these regiments.

Princess Eitel Friedrich will lead the twelfth dragoons before the Kaiser, and at the same parade Queen Victoria of Sweden will probably appear as colonel of the thirty-fourth fusiliers.

Other royal ladies who may be seen at the parades are the Crown Princess of Greece, the Grand Duchess Louise of Baden, and Princess Augusta Wilhelm of Prussia.

CHINESE MINISTER IS PLEASED BY BRITISH RECEPTION ON VISIT

(Special to the Monitor)

LONDON—His excellency Liang Tun Yen, who is now in Europe, will shortly take up his post as minister for foreign affairs in Peking, and in an interview with a Reuter's representative in London, he expressed his approval of the relations existing between his country and Great Britain, and his pleasure in his reception by Sir Edward Grey.

He said that England had always been very fair and just to China, and that the relations between the countries were very good. "At the present moment," he said, "there are no outstanding questions between us, all having been satisfactorily settled."

With regard to the opium question the minister spoke of the importance of the movement to China.

"We hope to continue our efforts in reducing the consumption of opium," he said, "and have already made wonderful strides in abolishing its growth and use"; and he added that the new agreement with Great Britain would materially help the attainment of this end.

In reply to a question as to Chinese policy with regard to Thibet, his excellency said: "We have no new policy concerning Thibet. Our one aim is to maintain peace and quietude there, and to carry out our treaty of obligations with Great Britain."

VICTORIA WANTS NAVY CONTRACTS

(Special to the Monitor)

MELBOURNE, Vic.—It is hoped by the government that Victoria will obtain a share of the contracts for building the commonwealth navy, and that all the work will not be done at the New South Wales government yard at Cockatoo island. With this object in view tenders have been invited for the extension of the state ship building yards.

VICTORIA'S HEAD TELLS OF STATE'S FAST PROGRESS

(Special to the Monitor)

LONDON—The Hon. John Murray, prime minister of Victoria, Aus., gave some interesting statistics at a complimentary dinner at which he was the chief guest recently.

Referring to the development of the state which he represented, he said that an area of 3,653,535 acres was under crop in Victoria. As regards population, there were, 75 years ago, only 177 white people, whereas there are now 1,325,000.

The financial year closed in June with the record general revenue of £9,134,000 ($45,670,000), or £536,000 ($2,680,000 in excess of the amount for the preceding year. The railway revenue also he explained was a record one, being £4,887,000 ($24,435,000), or £443,138 ($2,215,690) over the revenue of the previous year.

The surplus of railway revenue was £237,000 in excess of the expenditure, showing an increase of £82,000 over the surplus of the previous financial year.

Victoria he said, was the only state without a public debt. The imports for 1908 were worth £27,197,696 ($135,998,480), whereas at the present time they amounted to £29,379,000 ($146,895,000), the exports for the same period representing respectively £27,196,201 ($135,981,005) and £36,737,000 ($183,685,000).

SWEET PEAS WIN PRIZE OF $5000 FROM DAILY MAIL

(Special to the Monitor)

LONDON—The prize of £1000 ($5000) offered by the London Daily Mail for the best bunch of sweet peas, was awarded after close and prolonged scrutiny, to Mrs. J. H. Fraser of Strauston, Kelso, N. B.

The blooms were of carmine, pink and maroon, and they won because they were the best grown, the best in size and condition, and because there were four blooms upon one stem.

The second prize of £100 ($500) was awarded to H. W. Richards (Ryde, Isle of Wight), and the third of £50 ($250) to the Rev. J. H. Fraser, the husband of the winner of the first prize. These two sets of blooms were not grown on the same plant.

In all 38,000 bunches were received, of which 10,000 were shown at the festival of empire in the Crystal palace.

MAHARAJAH GIVES $40,000 TO CHARITY

(Special to the Monitor)

LONDON—Sir Madho Rao Sindhia Bahadur, Maharajah of Gwalior, has placed the sum of £8000 ($40,000) at the disposal of the King for distribution to such charitable institutions as he might deem wise. It was this Indian prince who recently distinguished himself by a remarkable act of horsemanship at Hurlingham, which was described in these columns at the time. Though quite a young man, he was present at the coronation of King Edward as well as that of King George, and as an honorary aide-de-camp to the King holds the rank of a general in the army.

INSPIRATION THEME OF PASTOR HALTS AS GRENADIERS LEAVE

(Special to the Monitor)

BERLIN—A remarkable scene occurred in a Lutheran church at Charlottenburg on Sunday. The pastor, Herr Kraatz, had just returned from his summer vacation and was addressing his congregation, by whom he is exceedingly beloved, upon general topics and matters that had taken place during his absence.

He referred in moderate and tactful words to the case of his fellow pastor Jatho, who has been dismissed from the Lutheran church on account of his broad views. Herr Kraatz spoke of the interpretation of the Scriptures, and said they were not now generally considered the literal word of God; the Bible was a godly book written by men like ourselves, but men with their hearts burning with the love of God and therefore in that sense inspired.

These words appeared to make a number of officers of the grenadier guards, who were present with 150 men, exceedingly uneasy. They whispered together, and then rose and beckoned the men to follow them out of the church. The disturbance was great and some people became alarmed and left the building too.

The minister, however, after being compelled to pause for a few moments continued his discourse. There has been a great deal of indignation expressed at the conduct of the military men, and Herr Kraatz has had his sermon printed so that the public may read and judge for themselves.

DUTCH-BELGIAN ENTENTE DESIRED AS PROTECTION

(Special to the Monitor)

BRUSSELS—The welcome accorded to the Queen of Holland, who was accompanied by the prince consort, on arrival in this city was most enthusiastic, and the opinion held in many quarters in this country is that some definite understanding should be made with Holland which would be of more value to both countries than the mere expression of friendliness made on such occasions as the present one.

The question of the possibility of making some military arrangements between the two countries has already been discussed in Belgium, and the remark made by King Albert in proposing the health of Queen Wilhelmina at a state banquet in the evening, when he declared that "I sincerely hope that our two peoples, so brave and so industrious as they are, may come to understand more and more their common aspirations, and that solidarity may be created by the many interests which naturally unite the one to the other," may perhaps foreshadow some more permanent agreement which may be made in the near future.

SLAVES FREED IN SUDAN

(Special to the Monitor)

CAIRO—Dr. Karl Kumm, who recently completed a journey across the Sudan from the Niger to the Nile, stated in the course of a lecture that as the result of the intrusion of European powers as many as 200,000 slaves were liberated a short time ago in the Sudan.

KING SENDS SCREEN AS SPECIAL GIFT TO CITY CORPORATION

Arms of London and of Old East India Company Are Upon Coronation Present Offered Mansion House

THANKS TENDERED

(Special to the Monitor)

LONDON—On the occasion of the visit of the King and Queen to the Guildhall in coronation week, the King said to the lord mayor that he had in his possession at Buckingham palace an interesting old screen, which he was having renovated and repaired and which he wished to present to the city corporation as a memento of the coronation.

The screen has now been received at the Mansion house with following letter, dated from the lord chamberlain's office, St. James palace:

"My Lord Mayor:

"The lord chamberlain has received the King's commands to offer to the corporation of the city of London as a present from their majesties the screen forwarded to the Mansion house some days ago. The screen having upon it the arms of the corporation of the city of London, the King and Queen are specially anxious that it should be preserved in the possession of the corporation as a memorial of the coronation of their majesties. I have the honor to be, my lord mayor, your lordship's obedient servant, DOUGLAS DAWSON."

At a meeting of the corporation held at the Guildhall, the lord mayor said that he had assured his majesty that the corporation would be very grateful for the gift, and that the King had approved an inscription which it was proposed to insert in ivory in the screen.

The screen would be placed in the art gallery for visitors to see. With the city arms appearing in the screen were also those of the old East India Company, which was founded in the reign of Queen Elizabeth. It might therefore be that the screen had great antiquarian interest in addition to its special value as a coronation gift from the sovereign. Personally he thought the date of the screen was the reign of George III.

A resolution tendering the thanks of the corporation was unanimously carried.

LABOR MINISTRY RESIGNS OFFICE

(Special to the Monitor)

SYDNEY, N. S. W., Aus.—The Labor ministry, which came into office in November last, has now resigned owing to the withdrawal of the support of the Independents and the resignation of two Labor members, due to their being unable to agree on the subject of the land policy of the government.

The main point to which objection was raised was the proposal to repeal the act permitting the conversion of holdings from leasehold into freehold.

CENTRAL COLONIAL BANK IS OPPOSED IN COMMITTEE

(Special to the Monitor)

PARIS—The well-known Senator M. Gervais, president of the mixed parliamentary committee on colonial banking, has convened a meeting of the members of the committee. It is now understood that there has developed much opposition to the scheme already presented to the Chamber by M. Ceccaldi and his friends, to which reference has already been made in these columns and which purports to provide for the absorption of all the existing colonial banks by one central bank, having its head office at Paris, and which would, according to M. Ceccaldi's scheme, take over immediately at least all those banks whose charters expire at the end of the present year.

It is now reported that M. Billecocq of the ministry of the colonies, who was instructed by the committee to fully investigate the question and report to the committee, according to the Temps, has deposited his report in which he makes recommendations as to the necessity of maintaining the present banks and also the present regime.

He reports that the replacement of these various banks by a unique colonial bank, or even their absorption by any financial house such as the Banque de l'Afrique Occidentale Francaise, would involve very serious inconveniences.

Moreover, it is thought that a metropolitan bank would not be in a position to lend itself to such operations as, for instance, loans on growing crops, which are really the first raison d'etre of the colonial banks. Proof of this is to be seen in the fact that although both the banks of L'Indo Chine and that of L'Afrique Occidentale Francaise have the necessary powers to make such class of loans, up to the present they have never done so. Further it is realized that the present system of colonial banks is better suited to the class of business which is found to exist in the old French colonies and which cannot be regarded as having any individual economic future.

Whatever may be the value of the various arguments set forth in the report of M. Billecocq, they have not failed to draw out M. Lagrosiliere, the deputy from Martinique, whose humor is well known and who in a letter strongly protests against this sudden calling together of the committee, especially as the vacation is now being held.

He sees in the feverish haste to do business a lack of good faith which contrasts violently with the habitual nonchalance of French administration in general and of the ministry of the colonies in particular.

M. Lagrosiliere does not even hesitate to declare that it is in effect intended to serve a particular clique in the colonial, financial and industrial world. The result of the committee's deliberations will be watched with much interest.

CIVILIZING MOROCCO IS NOT SEEN AS AID TO THE MOORS

(Special to the Monitor)

LONDON—R. B. Cunninghame-Graham has spent a considerable time in Morocco, and he is so well acquainted with the country that anything he may say on the subject of the political outlook at the present moment in that part of the world is of the greatest interest.

Discussing the present condition of affairs with a representative of the Evening Standard, he said:

"I have always been against the Europeanization of Morocco, whether by France, Germany or Spain. Neither of these nations has anything tangible to offer the Moors.

"It has to be remembered that all the talk about harbors, railways, mining developments and the rest of it, of which the newspapers have been so full for the last year or two in regard to Morocco, only refer to schemes that would be beneficial to the concessionaire, for the Moors have no necessity at present for any of the so-called improvements. Politically they would lose their independence by them and economically they would only be rendered slaves."

Moors Not Gainers

Mr. Cunninghame-Graham pointed out also that it had been alleged that work would be provided for the Moors by these undertakings. "This," he said, "was true, but others would have the profits." He also expressed the opinion that it would be better for the Moors for three or even four powers to be in possession of their territory than one, although he believes that in reality no country likes being ruled abroad.

Referring to the Agadir incident, Mr. Cunninghame-Graham fails to see in what way it will be prejudicial to Great Britain.

"It is true," he pointed out, "that Agadir is only 400 miles from Gibraltar but then Oran is not much more than 400 miles upon the other side, and what of the ports of Spain?

"I believe that if Germany were to acquire a port in Agadir, in the event of war with her it would be a source of weakness rathen than of strength, as she would be obliged to defend it."

Honesty Essential

With respect to the solution of the question Mr. Cunninghame-Graham said:

"There seems to me but one solution of the Morocco question. Honesty is the best policy, but so few people care to try it, just as so few people care to dignify themselves by engaging in that labor which they say dignifies mankind.

"What the powers of Europe, in their wisdom, may determine with regard to Morocco no one can tell, but a return to the act of Algeciras, which they all solemnly signed in 1905, would hurt nobody and would provide the unusual spectacle of the powers of Europe acting in good faith.

"France would lose nothing, as her continued occupation of Fez must be, in the end, a source of weakness and danger to her by tying up so many troops in Africa in the event of a European war.

"Germany would lose nothing, as all that sensible German politicians should really require is the 'open door' in Morocco. As to Spain, expansion in North Africa has always been an ignis fatuus to her.

"Speaking as an Englishman, I cannot understand why at Algeciras no provision was made for the protection of British interests in Morocco, seeing that 63 per cent of the trade is in our hands. It is unthinkable that if there is to be a general scramble for Morocco Tangier should not be adjudicated to England.

THE HOME FORUM

LEAF TAKEN FROM THE NOTE BOOK

ON a hot day one crossed the scintillating pavement to the shady arch of the railway station with haste to reach the cool space just inside where the sun never comes and where a draft is always blowing. Each side of the wide arch as one passed through lay curled on the pavement a little gamin, dirty and ragged, but very intent and evidently having a good time. One boy set a marble at a certain spot near the stone base of the arch and the other from across the walk shot the other marbles at it. Passengers noting the boys paused to allow the marble just discharged to roll on its way unstopped; some paused to watch the play. But the boys evidently had no eyes for anything but their sport. When the first lad's marbles were exhausted, the other had begun shooting them back at one retained as a mark.

Well, the boys were enjoying themselves at a harmless sport enough—apparently they did not play "for keeps"—and the huge station with the hurrying hordes suddenly seemed less bare and crude, as one began to note how many perhaps all but homeless folk were finding a resting place there if but for the moment.

Reaching the train that was to carry one to places of pleasanter resort one had a few moments to wait and observe. Enter to the seat in front two other children, girls this time, in all the careful array of daintiest summer clothes. Here were stiffly starched little skirts and white linen hats with big pink bows; and grown up straw bag that evidently held more stiffly starched white dresses and blue ribbons, no doubt. The two staggered and stumbled in, carrying it together. These carefully sheltered little things were being trusted to reach the suburban station alone, the elder being fully 11 and able to take care of little sister. They sat very nicely, like little ladies, and spoke together in careful whispers, with an irresistible giggle gurgling forth when a peanut burst unexpectedly soon out of the shell and snapped across the aisle toward a large sleepy lady over yonder. For the girls had evidently found peanuts the limit of joyful expense for investing the nickels father had given them.

Childhood is much the same, whether it scrambles over a city sidewalk in hose guiltless of darns, but needing them, or tip-tilts along in immaculate going-a-visiting dimity. Let the fathers who administer the doings of the big world remember this, and know that the irrepressible youngsters it may come their way to discipline in the public service are somebody else's boys, are boys very much as they themselves were once. City mothers, if we had them, would be less likely to forget this. To most of the women of earth, to so many that one may say all and lose sight of the pitiful minority, childhood is dear wherever manifest, and sympathy with the childish point of view springs spontaneously to defend, to cherish and to bless.

In Solitude

He is not desolate whose ship is sailing
Over the mystery of an unknown sea,
For some great love with faithfulness unfailing
Will light the stars to bear him company.

Out in the silence of the mountain passes
The heart makes peace and liberty its own—
The wind that blows across the scented grasses
Bringing the balm of sleep—comes not alone.

Beneath the vast illimitable spaces
Where God has set His jewels in array,
A man may pitch his tent in desert places
Yet know that heaven is not so far away. . . .

—Virna Sheard in Scribners.

SHAKESPEARE AND BEN JONSON

IT was in his volume of observations on men and matters called "Timber or Discoveries" that Ben Jonson set the famous passage about Shakespeare which runs as follows:

"I remember the players have often mentioned it as an honor to Shakespeare that in his writing (whatsoever he penned) he never blotted out a line. My answer hath been, 'Would he had blotted a thousand,' which they thought a malevolent speech. I had not told posterity this but for their ignorance who chose that circumstance to commend their friend by wherein he most faulted; and to justify mine own candor, for I loved the man, and do honor his memory this side idolatry as much as any. He was, indeed, honest and of an open and free nature; had an excellent phantasy, brave notions, and gentle expressions, wherein he flowed with that gentle facility that sometimes it was necessary he should be stopped."

Thomas Fuller, who belonged to the next generation, conserved in his volume of "Worthies" the gossip and old wives tales which he had picked up at enormous cost of time and patience and acquaintances carefully cultivated. He would sit for hours chatting with some woman of the past generation, drawing her out to talk of the things she had seen and known and perhaps imagined of old times. He, too, has a passage referring to Shakespeare which is interesting in this connection:

"Many were the contests betwixt Shakespeare and Ben Jonson, which two I behold like a Spanish great galleon and an English man of war; Master Jonson, like the former, was built far higher in learning; solid but slow in his performances, Shakespeare, with the English man of war, lesser in bulk but lighter in sailing, could turn with all tides, tack about and take advantage of all winds, by the quickness of his wit and invention."

This comment by Fuller is further interesting as showing how the folk of his own time estimated Shakespeare—as evidently of less solid importance than the contemporary men of learning, a man to be admired for his facility but certainly not to be honored for high attainments as "rare Ben Jonson" was honored.

Today Shakespeare's words are household phrases close knit into the English language, while Jonson is known to the many chiefly because he knew Shakespeare. It is perhaps only one more evidence of the surpassing quality of Shakespeare's genius that men have tried to ascribe his writings to the scholastic line of literary descent and to deny that he wrote his own plays. Genius is always so surprising a phenomenon to the world that it can scarcely be believed and human surmise at once begins to try to account for it in some other way than as the spontaneous and natural expression of man or womanhood.

RESPONSIBILITY

IF there is one question more frequently raised than another regarding the character of a business man it is as to his financial responsibility. The fact that a large portion of the world's business is now transacted by means of credits tends to emphasize the importance of individual responsibility. The moral wave which has recently swept over the entire commercial world has greatly quickened the public conscience in general, and the old saying that "honesty is the best policy" is now being superseded by a more radical statement, namely, that "honesty is the only policy."

One of the definitions of responsibility given in the dictionary is "the state of being responsible for a trust." This definition may be regarded as twofold, namely, being responsible for having trust; as well as, responsible for being trustworthy. The primary trust for which all mortals are responsible is to have trust in God. This trust having been established, the ability to trust others and the state of trustworthiness must naturally follow as a consequence.

Responsibility, therefore, in the highest sense must be based on fidelity to Principle. While the responsible business man may not attribute his integrity of character in any sense to religion, the fact remains that adherence to the right, even in business, is nothing more nor less than religion in practice. It is worthy of note that the words religion and responsibility are more closely related than might appear on the surface. The derivation of the former is "to bind back" or to serve God, and the root of the latter is "to answer back," hence "able to respond or answer in accordance with what is expected or demanded" by God. Man's duty being to reflect or mirror back the likeness of God, this spiritual response is in fact the true religion which Jesus described as worshiping the Father in spirit and in truth.

Having seen that there is one infinite Mind which governs man and the universe, it logically follows that man is fulfilling his responsibility only to the extent that he puts off the old man or belief in having an independent will and places his trust in the universal Principle. As no man can really trust anything honestly that he does not understand, it becomes his duty to know something of this one Mind or divine Principle and to conform to its laws. With this end in view, Christian Science has come to enlighten the world and to set it free from spiritual ignorance. It teaches that all true progress depends upon obedience to Principle and that adherence to right methods of thinking and living is as essential to permanent business success as to health and holiness.

Solomon said, "Seest thou a man diligent in his business? he shall stand before kings; he shall not stand before mean men." This statement is of course based upon the assumption that the man is engaged in a good business and that his diligence is an expression of devotion to his highest sense of right rather than selfishness. Solomon sounded the keynote of true business when he said "Buy the truth, and sell it not; also wisdom, and instruction and understanding." He knew full well that temptations entered into all the transactions of business life and declared that the quest after worldly riches was vanity and vexation of spirit.

Jesus was engaged in his Father's business and when he saw Peter and Andrew at work with their nets he said "Follow me, and I will make you fishers of men." This would indicate that the chief concern in life is to bring humanity to a knowledge of the truth about God and the real man, thus emancipating mortals from their belief of life in matter. Fidelity to this great trust has characterized all the great reformers of religious thought in this and past ages. All have seen the need of awakening in mankind a better understanding of the all-power of God, but few since the days of Jesus and his immediate followers, until the advent of Christian Science, have succeeded in effectively practising the healing and regenerating power of the Word.

Christian Science undertakes to fulfil the teachings of the great prophet of Galilee both literally and spiritually. It explains his method of healing sickness and forgiving sin, and shows that his works were wrought strictly in accord with the divine Principle of being. In her text-book of Christian Science Mrs. Eddy has given us a comprehensive statement of divine Metaphysics and has opened a door through which any sincere seeker can now find the Truth which makes men free. The responsibilty which Mrs. Eddy's discovery places upon the human race is now being felt all over the universe. Having accomplished her work as the Discoverer and Founder of Christian Science, Mrs. Eddy declared, "Truth is revealed. It needs only to be practised" (Science and Health, p. 174). This is the sacred trust which she has bequeathed to mankind individually and collectively. It begins with a partial perception of man's perfection as a child of God and it grows clearer and nearer as the vision broadens.

It is equally as true of Christian Science as of all other studies that practice alone makes perfect. It has been truly said that the kingdom of heaven can only be entered as heaven is realized in one's own heart. So it is with the Christian Scientist, he can demonstrate the divine Principle only so far as he has the true unselfed love of divine Principle in his own inner consciousness. Mrs. Eddy says that Jesus came to show mortals how to do "life's work aright . . . but not to do it for them nor to relieve them of a single responsibility" (Science and Health, p. 18).

INVADING THE WORLD OF BOREAS

BONANZA COPPER MINE, ALASKA

AS A SOLACE in August, views of snowy fastnesses are cheerful contemplation. The cut gives some notion of what the workingman on the new Alaska railroad went through and why his wages had to be many dollars a day with the best provisions that could be carried to him. These are the snow fields that lay about the Bonanza copper mine when the railroad reached it on March 29, 1911. What April did to reduce these mountains of snow is not recorded. It seems unlikely that the inhabitants are ever driven to sleeping in the parks, and yet they say that Alaska strawberries are things to remember. There appear to be compensations all round the calendar for everybody everywhere.

My Holiday

GUARD thou my peace, O sea, for, far away,
I hear the tireless world's tumultuous rush!
Now, lest its clamor mar my holiday,
Repeat thy gentle waves' oft-murmured "Hush!"
Bid me, this one blest day, to fear no gale,
But search with quiet gaze the distance dim,
Where the white flutter of a friendly sail
Gives greeting, ere it sinks beneath the rim!

CHEERFUL YANKEE ON OLD DAYS

IRVING BACHELLER has described the Cheerful Yankee in various phases. One is seen as follows:

On the side of a hill the author came upon a man seated beside a tiny house much older than the man. Above, on what appeared to be an almost perpendicular ledge, there was growing a beautiful field of grain.

"How did you get that grain up there?" the author asked the man.

"Shot it up with a musket," was the cheerful rejoinder.

"Is that the truth?"

"No, that's conversation."

"I suppose there have been a good many changes in this part of the world," the author ventured again.

"Now, young man, you've taken the top off the pickle jar," the cheerful one replied. "Why, when I grew up all down in those valleys and on those hills were farms and a village. Then the people all began to move West, until it seemed like everybody almost had gone West.

"You see that grand stone mansion down there? Well, that's Jackson Bird's. He went to school with me. When he used to talk to folks he would look at their necks. People used to call him an inspector of Adam's apples.

"He went West and a few years ago he came back here and bought the old farm and built that mansion. His father had a large family, 13 children. Now Jackson has 13 horses, 18 dogs and one child, with a hired mother to look after that child. Every Sunday Jackson and his guests on the horses with the dogs go racing through the valley and over the hills chasing happiness.

"In my day we didn't have to chase happiness; happiness chased us. Some days she didn't catch us until night came. When I was a boy all we had to do to feel happy was to rest our head on our arm and drop off to sleep. That was happiness."—New York Sun.

To Act Well Her Part Honor Enough

THERE is a story to the effect that a friend of Christina Rosetti told her, when the laureateship was under consideration, that he had heard "hundreds of people" say they wished she might be honored with the laurels from "the brow of him who uttered nothing base."

This sensitive, shrinking woman was aghast at the idea and said she would like such a thing as little as she much desired to write all she wrote correctly and truly. Then she pinned her friend down to the actual facts, as was her wont, in her sincerity, and he had to confess that only nine persons had spoken of the thing.

She had little in common, writes a reviewer in the Fortnightly, with the vagaries of her brothers and his friends of the Pre-Raphaelite brotherhood.

Wagner's Love of the Ninth Symphony

It was Beethoven's ninth symphony, rather than the music of "Egmont" or the A major symphony, which made the deepest impression upon the young Wagner. He writes:

"Beethoven's ninth symphony became the mystical goal of all my strange thoughts and desires about music. I was first attracted to it by the opinion prevalent among musicians, not only in Leipzig but elsewhere, that this work had been written by Beethoven when he was already half mad. It was considered the non plus ultra of all that was fantastic and incomprehensible, and this was quite enough to rouse in me a passionate desire to study this mysterious work. At the very first glance at the score, of which I obtained possession with much difficulty, I felt irresistibly attracted by the long-sustained pure fifths with which the first phrase opens: these chords, which, as I have related above, had played such a supernatural part in my childish impressions of music, seemed in this case to form a spiritual keynote of my life."

Poet's Cabin

A poet's log cabin has been one of the less conspicuous sights of Washington, D. C., ever since Joaquin Miller, now 70 years old and living in his California hillside home, built and occupied it almost 40 years ago because he found himself uncomfortable in a house of the conventional pattern and with the conventional domestic equipment. On the high land near Sixteenth street and Florida avenue, on a piece of ground now owned by our ambassador to France, the songster of the Sierras found pure air and an unobstructed view in those early journalistic days of his exceedingly varied life, long before the wealth and fashion of the capital city had discovered, as it now has, that no finer sites than such a one as the eccentric writer had chosen could be desired for their suburban mansions. But this discovery of course means that the Joaquin Miller cabin must go; and accordingly the California State Society of the city of Washington has taken steps to remove the structure to Rock Creek park. —The Dial.

The first instance, so far as Colliers Weekly knows, of a filibuster was in ancient Rome, when Caesar wished to run for consul without meeting the formal requirements. Cato, being in a minority, dragged his speech in opposition out to such a length that the Senate was prevented from coming to a vote.

Art in New York Library

The art department is one of the most important sections of the New York library, from the educational and historical, as well as from the esthetic point of view. The rooms on the east front of the upper floor of the new building are devoted to this department, and contain the Lenox picture-gallery, the Stuart collection, the print rooms, and the most important works on the history of the fine arts, including the important art books of the Tilden collection. These rooms cover a floor space of 18,000 square feet, and are one of the most attractive features of the library to the general public, as well as to artists and art students.—Century.

CHILDREN'S DEPARTMENT

Mother Goose Party

Is there any child who does not know the Mother Goose people? Then he or she ought to have been invited to the party that is told about in Little Folks. Tommy was all dressed up in a picture-book suit, with a red cap and a long feather and long red stockings. And he was Tom, the Piper's Son. His pig was made of pasteboard and filled with chocolates. Jack and Jill carried the lemonade to the party in a big pail and the Queen of Hearts brought in a big platter of tarts. Mary Quite Contrary was very funny. When Mother Hubbard praised Marjorie Daw's orange colored dress Mary said that it was not orange colored but reddish yellow. Mother Hubbard replied that orange color was just that —reddish yellow.

"No," answered Mary Quite Contrary, "for oranges are green a long time before they are ripe, and when they are ripe they are eaten. So oranges are green a great deal longer than they are yellow, and orange color is really green." Which is a new idea, is it not? and a strong argument in favor of calling orange color green.

Once the king caught Tommy up on his knee and took the little toy pig out of his hand. He said that the pig ought to be eaten, according to the story about Tom the Piper's Son; but nobody wanted to eat the pasteboard pig, though everybody was glad to have one of the chocolates. And so Tom didn't have to be beaten, in this story, because his pig was not eaten. Which was a very good way to get out of it.

New York Vision of Beauty to an Artist's Eye

New York rises a vision, a mirage of the lower bay, the color by day more shimmering than Venice, by night more magical than London. In the morning the mountains of buildings hide themselves, to reveal themselves in the rosy steam clouds that chase each other across their heights in the evening. They are mighty cliffs glittering with golden stars in the magic and mystery of the night. The city is finer than anything in any world that ever existed, finer than Claude ever imagined or Turner ever dreamed. Piling up higher and higher before you, it reminds one of San Ginuguano of the Beautiful Towers in Tuscany, only here are not 11, but 11 times 11, not low, mean brick piles, but noble palaces, crowned with gold, with green, with rose, and over them the wavering, fluttering plume of steam, the emblem of New York.—Joseph Pennell.

ABBEY LIVED AMONG BACKGROUNDS

"It is not because Mr. Abbey does not love America that he lives in England, but because all his backgrounds are in the latter country. When he illustrates Shakespeare, Herrick or Goldsmith, he need go no further than the little village near which he lives to get it all. The narrow village streets, the thatched cottages, the little diamond-paned windows, the vine-covered doorways, the old-fashioned gardens, the high walls with the fruit trees growing on them, all are there. Indeed, he need scarcely go further than his own house, with its deepset windows, its stone-covered, moss-grown gables, its walls and gardens, to set his scenes in their original settings."

It will be many years before the true rank of Edwin A. Abbey in the world of art can be decided, as is the case with all artists who are above the ordinary. He had his admirers who hailed him as the greatest of mural decorators after Puvis de Chavannes. He had as a painter his detractors, who, while allowing he was a good illustrator, considered his paintings merely colored illustrations, from which all animation had been painted out. Among his admirers as a painter was the Royal Academy, which first made him an A. R. A., and in 1898 elected him a Royal Academician, for the Royal Academy has never officially recognized the revolution in this country, and admits Americans to full membership, just as if they were still subjects of the British sovereign, while other foreigners are only admitted to honorary membership. The high esteem with which Mr. Abbey was held in England is shown by his having been invited to superintend the new mural decorations for the houses of Parliament in London.—New York Post.

Ratification of the Peace Treaties

PRESIDENT TAFT'S appeal in behalf of the peace treaties now awaiting disposition in the Senate, before the Mountain Park (Md.) Chautauqua of the Methodist Episcopal church, on Monday, took special cognizance of the sensitiveness of that chamber with regard to a possible invasion of its prerogatives. Mr. Taft has greater reason than the general public to be mindful of this sensitiveness. He has had to contend with it in relation to the reciprocity matter and the negotiations with Central American states as well as in connection with the arbitration treaties with Great Britain and France recently signed at the White House. If it could be made clear that the Senate's prerogatives would not be disturbed in any way by carrying out the administration's policy, that body would be less inclined than it is now to delay action which, to have full moral effect upon the world's opinion, should be prompt and hearty.

Almost at the very outset of his address he touched upon this phase of the matter. "I observe," he said, "that there is some intimation that by ratifying these treaties the Senate may in some way abdicate its functions of treaty making. I confess myself unable to see the substance of such a point." However, his reference to it, his dwelling upon it and his return to it is proof that he recognizes the existence of this impression in the Senate as an obstacle in the way of the peace program. He insisted that the Senate's power to make a treaty necessarily involves its power to bind itself to perform the offices which the main treaty provides shall be performed on the side of the United States, and then to abide the result and to acquiesce or, in so far as may be, perform and execute the judgment of the arbitration tribunal.

In other words, as the President views it, while the peace pacts provide for commissions and, when necessary, for arbitration tribunals, these will simply carry out the terms of the treaties made, so far as the United States is concerned, by the Senate. There will probably not be so much treaty making under the new conditions as formerly, but wherever fundamental questions arise they will necessarily have to be decided by the treaty-making powers of the countries concerned. The Senate, in behalf of the United States, is a part creator of the commissions or tribunals which are intended to take charge of the details of settlement.

Touching upon the point of jurisdiction, the President cannot see why the Senate may not agree, on behalf of the nation, "to abide in the judgment of an impartial tribunal or, by treaty, to establish a tribunal to consider a certain class of cases and decide them, whether one or many, whether existing or in the future, or to accord to the tribunal itself or some other impartial commission not only the power to decide certain issues but also to decide whether the issue comes within the jurisdiction of the tribunal in accordance with the terms of the treaty." He is fully conscious himself of the importance of convincing the Senate that its fears are groundless, and his speech is plainly intended to enlighten the public with regard to the cause of the delay of ratification.

If the Senate hesitates, delays, refuses to join heartily with the administration, it will be difficult to prevent the impression from gaining ground abroad that the United States is not as enthusiastic for universal peace as it has been represented to be. The times are ripe at present for the extension of the work so happily begun by the United States, Great Britain and France. There is reason to hope that Japan and, perhaps, Germany may come into the compact. They will hardly be in a hurry to do so, however, if the present treaties shall be allowed to hang fire. Popular opinion in the United States should respond to the President's appeal. The Senate, at least, should not be left long in doubt, if it entertains a doubt now, with regard to national sentiment toward the promotion of world peace.

PRESIDENT TAFT'S riding horse has been named "Reciprocity," and it appears to be as agreeable to the animal as to his owner. Still, as in another case, if it doesn't work all right it can be changed later on.

Togo at Mt. Vernon

Togo, the "Nelson of Japan," is not the first eminent man of his race to seek out the grave of Washington at Mt. Vernon and pay homage to the greatest of the founders of the republic. A series of such visits there, at Grant's tomb on the banks of the Hudson and to the lesser-known last resting-places of Americans conspicuous in any way in opening up Japan to the western world, has taught Americans how sensitive the Japanese are to all the finer shadings of reverence and courtesy. Nor has observation of this characteristic failed to shape in part the kindly feeling toward them, which was conspicuous when the conflict with Russia came and that then aligned Americans with the Asiatic rather than with the European people.

Of course, there are cynics, despisers of form, scoffers at social conventions and contemptuous of politeness, who are inclined to see in these pilgrimages of Asiatic visitors to places like Mt. Vernon only an exhibit of that craft with which the oriental is charged, that desire to placate and flatter which it is supposed is dominant in the oriental and most of all in the "Frenchmen of the east." But not so do wise occidentals look upon this display of reverence for the mighty of the past, this homage to greatness shown in service of the state. Splendidly wholesome and corrective of the superficiality and contemporaneousness of American life would be imitation of Chinese and Japanese regard for the customs that impress upon recurring generations of youth the fact that national and family life are anchored in an aboriginal past. Orientals' consciousness of this gives them a poise, a superiority to the blandishments of the garrulous demagogue preaching discarded fancies as if they were new facts, a preference for evolution rather than revolution, which occidentals might well covet. The oriental remembers the great personality of the past, so does not succumb as readily to the egotism and self-valuation of the mediocrity of the present.

Thus it was that Togo, after formally paying his respects to the living head of the nation, insisted upon going to Mt. Vernon formally to pay homage to Washington's memory. For him it was not a sight-seer's jaunt. Piety, as he knows it, includes lasting admiration for men who founded a nation, who revealed bravery, who showed forth wisdom, who subordinated self to common civic good. This reverence makes its own ritual, uses any language, and is understood of all brave and generous spirits. May occidentals visiting Asia be as obedient to the faith that reverences greatness wherever shown as orientals are who visit this country.

THE periodicals are now going into the matter of telling the truth about the Camorra, leaving us to wonder what we have been hearing about it up to this time.

George W. Perkins on the Situation

THE address prepared by George W. Perkins for delivery before the Michigan College of Mines at Houghton on Monday is certain to receive the serious attention of thinking people of all shades of political and economic belief. Mr. Perkins, first of all, will be credited with wholesome candor in his presentation of the case against as well as for the great corporations, and this will go far toward insuring for his remarks unprejudiced consideration. One other point in his favor is that he has put forward clearly and temperately a statement of the situation as it is viewed today by tens of thousands of conservative people who, however,, are more or less distrustful of their own judgment in the premises, and who will be glad that expression has been given to their thoughts. What Mr. Perkins says might have been said, in fact has been said, in substance at least, by others. The matter is not personal or political; it should be viewed regardless of personal and political considerations and from the broadest possible viewpoint.

Whatever may be the offenses of "the interests," it must be conceded that they are the outgrowth of conditions for which nobody in particular can justly be held responsible. They are here, and they are an immense factor in the industrial life of the period and the world. Nothing has been more evident to the clear-sighted and impartial observer for some time past than that, whatever abuses may have arisen as a consequence of corporate growth, reform must be carried along on lines that will be constructive rather than destructive. The people and their interests are bound up so closely in the new industrialism that widespread ruin must result from attempts to wreck it. The capitalists in the end, perhaps, will be the smallest sufferers; the workers, the commercial classes, the great body of the people which for the last ten years has been adjusting itself to the new order, will be forced to scramble for existence if thrown back suddenly upon the old system.

The need of corrective legislation is now everywhere admitted, but, from the supreme court down, it is the conviction of the thoughtful that reasonableness must govern both the framing and the enforcement of the law. No defense of unscrupulous monopoly is involved in the assertion that all of the trusts, so called, are not pernicious. The belief that success is an evidence of dishonesty, or that the possession of wealth is prima facie evidence of crime, is a dangerous basis for procedure intended to bring about better conditions for the whole people.

What seems to be lacking, what has seemed to be lacking throughout this entire controversy, is that spirit of fairness which insists upon looking upon the good as well as upon the bad side of every proposition. There is good in the new system; there is more good than bad in it; it is the good rather than the bad that calls for development. Mr. Perkins asks that reason rather than passion shall determine how the trusts shall be dealt with in the future. His plea is not put forward, however, in behalf altogether of "the interests" behind the combines, as these interests are popularly understood, but in behalf as well of the millions whose prosperity, comfort and happiness are bound up in such assurance, protection and stability as may be enjoyed by industry, trade and commerce.

Bankers and the Canal

AT ALL times an event of great importance to financial circles, the convention of the American Bankers Association to be held in New Orleans in November promises to furnish the delegates certain information that previous gatherings of the kind have been unable to offer. It has been arranged that when the business sessions of the convention are over 240 members of the association will sail for Panama. A special train will take the visitors across the isthmus, and a thorough inspection of the zone and construction will be made. After a four-day stay in the vicinity of the canal the return voyage to New Orleans will start from Colon.

Curiosity to know how the great undertaking is progressing may be one reason why these representative American financiers will visit the Panama canal. But deeper than this desire, it may be concluded, lies something intimately connected with the banking business of the country. Every member of the American Bankers Association, of course, is conversant with the fact that when the canal is completed trade and traffic will not only enter new channels, but that the money market will be brought into the arena as a decided factor in the success of the Panama waterway. The American financiers no doubt wish to inform themselves as to the magnitude of the undertaking, since the government's financial activity on behalf of the canal is already becoming marked. Naturally the members of the association will get all the enjoyment possible out of the Panama trip, but there is also the assurance that not one of the travelers will fail to take into account the industrial and financial lesson to be learned from what he will observe.

International money matters will undoubtedly occupy the attention of American bankers to a considerable degree when the canal once affords passage for the world's mercantile marine. To a large extent the American currency question is now much more than a national affair, and, as new business factors present themselves, new banking methods will be required.

As for the Panama canal bonds, the government essentially relies upon American bankers to work in harmony. Time alone can tell how successful the canal will prove, but when the members of the American Bankers Association inspect the work the impression should at least be brought home that, judging by the physical aspects of the enterprise, the government has been open handed so as to make the visible assets a credit to the nation which stands sponsor.

Military Aviation in South America

CERTAIN of the South American republics have military and naval establishments of no mean order, and in the case of Argentina and Chile each of these nations will before long have two dreadnoughts as additions to its war outfit. Brazil already possesses two of these immense fighting machines, with another building. Arbitration treaties to the contrary notwithstanding, the great nations evidently continue to equip themselves with engines for war, and while peace is the goal in view, in the estimation of some of the most pacific peoples disarmament will become a fact only when the battleship has reached its limits, when the torpedo boat has become obsolete, and when the aeroplane no longer offers anything that promises to carry destruction to its utmost.

In view of the ardor with which nations like Germany and France have seized upon the airship as a complement to their military equipment it was an almost foregone conclusion that some of the South American republics would follow suit. Neither Chile, Ecuador nor any other Latin-American republic need necessarily go to Europe for aeroplane tests since the government of the United States is now energetically at work with men and methods and machines. But as it happens, in the case of Chile France has had the call, and if the French aeronauts Odin and Beryeron undertake the task of instructing Chilean officials in the use of dirigibles and aeroplanes as has been proposed, there is little to prevent the country from becoming properly equipped with airships of an improved type.

Not long ago the Italian aeronaut Cattaneo gave some striking performances at Santiago after he had won a $25,000 prize at Buenos Aires. Chileans of high military rank then became convinced that dreadnought building would be incomplete without suitable aeroplane instruction for both the army and the navy. For this reason a commission has been appointed to investigate methods best suited for South American operation.

It is also significant that Ecuador proposes to send a number of young men to France for the purpose of studying aviation. But it ought not to be long before South American genius asserts itself in this as in other directions. It cannot be forgotten that it was a Brazilian, Santos-Dumont, who ten years ago won the Deutsch prize of $50,000 with his dirigible balloon. Where this notable South American has set the pace, others of his countrymen will no doubt follow. In the meantime, some of the Latin-American governments are apparently taking time by the forelock by getting ready with aviators who at least know how to pilot inventions of others.

Is the Hen Lazy or Just Careless?

THE American Poultry Association, in convention this week at Denver, Col., has been devoting serious attention to an alleged delinquency on the part of the American hen. It has been openly charged, and by persons whose statements along such lines carry much weight, that the American hen is laying only eighty eggs a year at the present time when she should, as a matter of fact, be laying not less than a hundred and fifty. In other words, the allegation is that the American hen's annual output at the present time is seventy eggs short of her average capacity. Taking her collectively, this means an annual loss of eggs to the approximate value of $100,000,000.

Grant Curtis of the executive committee and other members of the association who took part in the discussion expressed themselves, it is reported, as being convinced that the American hen's failure to rise to her potential opportunities is due altogether to laziness. There is no other reason, so far as they could see, why she should fall behind her producing capacity, disappoint those who have placed their confidence in her and contribute to the high cost of living. She is better housed and better fed than she used to be. She is surrounded by pleasanter environments and more elevating influences than formerly. Scholarly research and inventive genius are enlisted for her uplift. She is fed on inspected and certified pure food. She is not permitted to expose herself to the inclement weather. In many cases even her scratching is done for her. Great care is taken to prevent her breathing unsterilized air. She may cackle freely only when the temperature is favorable. And yet she lays to little more than 50 per cent of her capacity.

To poultrymen a perplexing and annoying thing about all this is that she was in the habit of laying to her full capacity under the abhorrent conditions existing before the limelight of the muck-raker was thrown upon her. In the days when she had to get out and chase angleworms and bugs or go hungry, when she had the run of the back lot, and was found now and then fluttering in front of a hesitating but impatient city auto—in the days when nobody paid attention to her, save when she signaled a duty performed—her output was invariably up to the standard. Almost simultaneously with the awakening of public sentiment in favor of her uplift, however, she ceased to employ to the full those functions with which nature has so generously equipped her.

It is a trifle strange that those who should understand the American hen best understand her least. So little do they appreciate her position, her attitude, her state of thought, that they seem to lose sight completely of the main cause of her apparent inefficiency, which, of course, is discontent occasioned by the revelations of the various cold storage inquiries. Proof that eggs laid by her ancestors at remote periods were still awaiting a favorable market, not only shocked the American hen, but, worse still, drove her to the point of utter recklessness. "What matters it," we may assume her to have reasoned, "if I lay an egg today or postpone it until tomorrow? The chances are that it will not be eaten for five, ten or fifteen years, or long after I shall have shuffled off these mortal feathers." And so the egg that might have been laid today was put off until tomorrow, while the egg that would have been laid tomorrow was not laid at all.

Of course, the present uplifted condition of the American hen renders her more than ever sensitive to impressions that are not conducive to her productivity. This is a point to be considered by those who are striving to understand her. But she is not lazy. Far from it. She has grown careless because of the manner in which her product has been handled. Let us hope that she does not become wholly indifferent and quit laying altogether.

THE present Bayreuth season, with "Die Meistersinger," Hans Richter and its splendid array of players, is an illustration of how a great recurrent event and a great artist combine in retaining their hold on an appreciative public.
